MEXICAN MIXUP AGAIN CRITICAL

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, June 13.—With an avalanche of official reports reaching Washington telling of the "worst Mexican situation we have had yet," officials of both war and state departments fear that even more trouble some times are not far distant. Special efforts are being made by the war department to have the 1,500 additional soldiers already ordered, stationed on the Mexican border before Carranza is told officially that American troops will not be withdrawn from Mexico at this time.

Warnings have reached the state department that the delivery of President Wilson's note refusing to comply with Carranza's demands will be a signal for violent anti-American outbreaks through Mexico. It is expected that transmission of the note will be delayed until the companies of engineers and artillerymen ordered yesterday shall have had time to reach the posts to which General Funston wishes to dispatch them.

In Washington it is believed that the White House has drastically changed its views of the Mexican situation. Since General Funston requested the call for the state militia of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico, he has a number of times asked for more troops, but all requests were refused until Secretary of War Baker issued yesterday's orders. The announcement of the sending of additional forces came after the receipt at the state department of official messages forecasting the attitude the Mexican people would take when they learned that the American forces were not to be withdrawn.

The state department already has evidence that rebel leaders in Mexico, and some Carranza officials, are preparing to rise with greater strength against the American forces soon. Ammunition is now being gathered in the interior of Mexico in supplies as large as can be obtained. Since the American arms embargo was clamped down, small lots of arms and ammunition have been received at Mexican ports from foreign countries. One report from the U. S. S. Nebraska at Vera Cruz, Captain Burrage said the Mexican natives were more incensed at the Carranza government because of the confiscation of their paper money than they were at Americans because of the continued stay of Pershing's forces in Mexico.

ST. LOUIS RESULT SEEMS CERTAIN

By Telegram to The Freeman.
St. Louis, Mo., June 13.—For president, Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

This will be the ticket named at the Democratic national convention which assembles at noon tomorrow. It will be named with the consent of President Wilson. And the administration leaders on the ground are confident that at the last moment all of the opposition fostered here for the purpose of paying off minor political grudges will be wiped out.

The suggestion of a "Donnybrook" still is in the air. But the administration is determined that it shall not be pressed to the point that rancor and bitterness shall be engendered that may imperil the party success in states which now are considered certainly Democratic. The old guard, in whose ranks are numbered the leaders of several of the big states, is all powerful to defeat Marshall for re-election if it so desires. It controls more than one-third of the delegates to the convention, being in almost exactly the same position that the Wilson followers were at the Baltimore convention four years ago. But following a conversation over the long distance telephone between the president in Washington and the representatives here of the Indiana Democratic organization, the word was passed along the line that the president has squarely lined up behind Vice-President Marshall, and that he will ask that he be nominated. That, it is admitted, assures his success unless the old guard wants a fight that will shatter the Democratic structure to its very center.

The general situation here today was much clarified. The big delegations were arriving on every train. They were full of ginger and started proceedings with a whoop. The word had been passed along the line that all pessimism must be set aside. "Wilson and Marshall; peace and prosperity; preparedness with thought, and a welcome to all Americans under the broad definition that patriotism was a welcome duty and not an achieved distinction," was the topic passed out for consideration by the spellbinders who will be given their preliminary try-outs during the weary hours that must pass between now and late on Friday night when the lever is to be thrown into high and the Democratic 1916 machine started on its first race for the presidential blue ribbon.

The Democracy fully realizes that the coming campaign is to be one which will eclipse all reasonable political records. The suggestion that the big issue for the Democracy should be the assault upon Justice Hughes for leading the bench to endorse active politics has been relegated to the discard. The attention of Senator Owen and certain other leaders who favored taking such action and reading into the platform a plank condemning Justice Hughes for his acceptance of the Republican nomination was called to the fact that twelve years ago in this very town the Democracy pressed into service Alton B. Parker, then justice of the court of appeals of the state of New York, a post which for judicial discretion and legal demands, was second only to that of a supreme court commission. And when called to act as the standard bearer of Democracy, Justice Parker, the Republicans are ready to assert, according to the word reaching the Democratic steering committee, was the chief justice of the Empire State's greatest tribunal.

The final program of procedure for the convention assembling tomorrow was completed today. It is as follows:

Wednesday Noon—Convention called to order by William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic national committee; call for the convention read by J. Bruce Kremer, acting secretary of the national committee; opening prayer by Rev. J. W. Lee; temporary officers for the convention named; speech of the chairman, Martin H. Givens, former governor of New York; naming of committees; recess until Thursday at noon.

Thursday—Noon, opening prayer by the Rev. J. J. Glennon, archbishop of St. Louis; credentials committee reports and permanent organization completed with U. S. Senator Ollie James as permanent chairman; rules completed and adjournment until Friday, 10 a. m.

Friday—Prayer by the Rev. W. O. Hendley, chaplain of Missouri senate; report of platform; recess until 8 o'clock when prayer by Rabbi Leon Harrison will precede commencement of nominations which are expected to be completed soon after midnight.

Saturday—Noon, national committee meets, organizes and elects chairman and arranges for opening of campaign.

Today was chiefly one of conference. The question of how to raise a campaign fund, who should be selected to manage the campaign; whether the president should get in the running and stump the country or stay at home and receive delegations, thus emulating the example of the late President McKinley, were under discussion. And the bearded and important delegate with his friends in marching delegations who are relied on to star and keep up the enthusiasm was here on the job. The leaders have decided to make it a real fight from the outset, and it is certain that no time will be devoted to "nice" talk.

It is now realized that with each side bidding for Progressive support, the initial advantage rests with Jus-

WOODWORKING PLANT AGAIN TO BE IN OPERATION.

Home of the Hub Manufacturing Company, a Boston corporation which has removed its principal factory to Kingston, where its management states manufacturing and shipping conditions are little short of ideal for the woodworking industry. The concern will manufacture toilet seats and wood specialties. In bringing this plant to Kingston, West Shore Freight Agent G. N. Wood gave valuable assistance, as did Frederick M. Snyder, who represented the owners of the plant which was formerly occupied by the Kingston Woodworking Company.

Justice Hughes, whose cause has been espoused by the Progressive party leaders who are expected to accept the refusal of Col. Roosevelt to run and name the justice as his successor within a week after the pending Democratic national convention goes down into history.

Feelers sent out by certain of the Democratic steering committee have been intended to bring back into the Democratic party those Progressives who are Democrats, but the suggestion that the Democratic leaders believed they had a chance to get the bulk of the Progressives into their organization have been characterized as chimerical.

What the Democrats want is to retain within the party fold the Republicans who voted with them four years ago and to bring back the Democrats who deserted Governor Wilson to support Col. Roosevelt.

That an effort will be made to do this through the direct claim that the Democratic party is the party of progress was shown today when Senator Owen of Oklahoma declared he would ask the resolutions committee to define the difference between the Republican and the Democratic parties on welfare legislation and the like. He declared that while pointing with pride to its record of the last four years, the administration had the right also to direct attention to the fact that it had enacted into law during the last four years, or now is supporting, before congress every bit of progressive legislation it had advocated since 1908.

Senator Owen, who is the author of a very comprehensive corrupt practices act, intends also to ask that the resolutions committee squarely on record as favoring a measure along the lines he is advocating. He has made it very plain that he considers such legislation absolutely imperative because of the intimations that a very large campaign fund will be raised to ensure the election of Justice Hughes.

HUGHES BUSY IN NEW YORK

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 13.—Declaring he had had a good rest, and felt no ill effects from the strenuous day he had in yesterday in opening his campaign, Charles E. Hughes was up at 7 o'clock this morning in accordance with his usual custom. After breakfast in his suite on the eighth floor of the Hotel Astor, the Republican candidate for president descended to his headquarters on the first floor.

His first task was to attack a huge pile of letters and telegrams, all of which conveyed the well wishes of friends. They were sent from all parts of the country and from men in all stations of life.

In handling the mass of correspondence, Mr. Hughes was aided by Lawrence Green, his secretary; Robert Fuller, who was his secretary when he was governor; W. R. Arndt, who will be his headquarters publicity man, and Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney who is acting as his aide.

Conferences with many political leaders are on the boards for today. Two important questions may be decided before the day is over. They are:

Where the formal notification of the candidate will take place.

Who will be chosen to lead the campaign.

Mr. Hughes is expected to stay in town until June 20 when he will go to Providence to attend the 35th reunion of the class of '81 at Brown University.

It is rumored that the notification ceremonies will take place on June 22.

Whether there will be a meeting between Mr. Hughes and Col. Roosevelt is problematical. The colonel came up from Oyster Bay today to attend to some literary matters, but would not discuss politics.

SUFFRAGE ACTIVITY AT ST. LOUIS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
St. Louis, Mo., June 13.—After two days of preliminary skirmishing women suffrage advocates today began a real drive on the Democratic national convention. The offensive is on two fronts. The Women's Party—led by some of the most prominent suffrage workers in America—is trying to force the Democrats to pledge the immediate adoption by congress of the Susan B. Anthony amendment, while the National Woman's Suffrage Association is demanding that the convention include in its platform a plank fully endorsing women's suffrage.

Though a majority of the Democratic leaders indicate that they will not seriously consider the woman's suffrage question, the leaders of the two organizations are optimistic. They declare that the Democratic party, if it wishes success in November, must recognize and endorse woman suffrage. The two bodies are not working in conjunction but they are not interfering with each other's program and it is hoped by those in charge of the plan that the delegates will be so impressed by the demonstration that they will demand a strong endorsement of woman suffrage in the platform. The suffragists will not say a word. They have been instructed to stand and stare at the delegates as they pass.

Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch has arrived to reinforce the Woman's Party's workers. She is in a decidedly belligerent mood.

In no uncertain terms she declares that the Democratic party—if it hopes for success at the November election—must not only include a strong suffrage plank in the platform, but must guarantee that the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the constitution, giving women the right to vote, be passed at once by congress. She has made no threats but has taken pains to state that the women now living in states where they are allowed to vote are fighting the battle for their sisters in every state and that their votes may decide the next presidential campaign.

The belief is expressed by politicians here that the Democratic party will issue in its platform a plank similar to the one adopted by the Republicans endorsing woman suffrage by state legislation. Suffrage leaders, however, declare that this will not suffice and openly state that if the Democrats do not do better than this the support of the country's women voters may go to another candidate.

WIFE IS DYING, SEEK HUSBAND

While friends and relatives are searching for Miles Seaman, who is said to have vanished from his home in Ellenville on the night of Wednesday, May 17, his wife lies at the point of death in Newburgh hospital. Seaman, who was employed by the Ulster Knife Works, is said to have grown tired of work in the factory and gone to seek work on a farm. The Seaman home in Ellenville, which is now unoccupied, is very cosy and both enjoyed it. Seaman also owns a horse and wagon, both of which are still at Ellenville and are being looked after by relatives. Seaman is said to have gone to Pine Bush where he was employed by Charles R. Reed, as a farm hand for a short time. He later left there and has not been heard of. Every effort is being made to locate the missing man.

Maxwell Allowed to Leave Jail.

After he had spent seventeen months in jail and had been tried twice for burglary without having been convicted, David Maxwell was given his liberty by County Judge Seeger in county court at Newburgh on Monday. Maxwell's release was asked by District Attorney Hirschberg, who said there was no new evidence against him and consequently no reason to believe a conviction could be obtained. Maxwell was arrested about a year and a half ago following a series of sensational postoffice, bank and store robberies in Orange county. He was suspected of being the leader of the gang of robbers who operated in automobiles. He was tried twice before for burglary but the evidence against him was flimsy and the jury disagreed both times.

They Have the Agency.

Robert Weston and John J. Kelly have taken the agency for the Schick paper baler and have been appointed sole representatives of Ulster county,

WORLD'S RECORD AT WOODCREST FARM

Woodcrest Ina De Kol 4th, 181529, a registered Holstein-Friesian cow, bred and owned by Woodcrest Farm, Rifton, on official test has just broken the world's 30 day butter record in the senior three-year-old class.

She freshened at the age of 3 years 9 months 19 days, dropping a beautiful heifer calf by King Walker 10358. Six days from calving she was started on official test and during 30 consecutive days she produced 2599.4 lbs milk, containing 143.97 lbs butter. This is a world's record at her age over all breeds. Her best seven day record was 818 lbs milk containing 34.56 lbs butter, made 16 days from calving. Her best single day was 105.9 lbs milk containing 4.06 lbs butter.

This is a very wonderful record, when you consider her age; but then the Woodcrest Farm herd, which is the best in Ulster county, contains only the highest record A. R. O. cows. World's records are broken by them every year. The management of Woodcrest Farm expects to make a 40 lb record on Woodcrest Ina De Kol 4th next year; and judging from her looks she is a very likely candidate for this high honor.

Senator Walton at Tannersville.

Senator Charles W. Walton will participate in the graduating exercises of the Tannersville High School, when on Wednesday evening, June 28, he will deliver an address in that place, as a part of the exercises which will be held during several days of the week.

PEACE PLANK IN ST. LOUIS PLATFORM

By Telegram to The Freeman.
St. Louis, June 13.—Hope for early cessation of the European war and for the restoration of world peace will be set forth in the Democratic national platform to be adopted by the convention which meets tomorrow. The peace plank will be added to the foreign relations declaration, the draft of which, written by President Wilson, was made public yesterday exclusively by the International News Service.

The suggestion that European peace be prayed for in the platform comes directly from President Wilson and it will probably be acceded to by the resolutions committee, which has the final word in framing the platform. The president's last word on the international planks in the tentative platform now under consideration will reach St. Louis tonight when Secretary of War Newton D. Baker arrives and it will cause the final revision of the declaration of party principles. While the essentials of the platform have been agreed upon, President Wilson may demand changes in the phraseology of various planks and party leaders are very willing to accept his dictum.

The probability of any long-prolonged or bitter fight on the resolutions committee or in the convention over the platform became more and more remote today. Members of the committee already selected were making every effort to placate seemingly obstreperous Democrats who wanted individual planks included in the platform. The proposal to incorporate a plank demanding that supreme court justices be barred from accepting any other political office, met with little favor among conservative Democrats, and it was practically settled that any fight made for this declaration would meet with little success. The arrival of William Jennings Bryan today was expected to bring to a focus the threatened trouble over prohibition, woman suffrage and Philippine independence. Members of the resolutions committee declared that Mr. Bryan with all other advocates of special planks would be accorded a frank and full hearing. But it was clear that the final word on proposed declarations would have to come from the White House.

As a means of placating the Committee, it was suggested today that arrangements be made to secure unanimous consent for him to address the convention itself to present his views of any subject. Fair and liberal treatment of Bryan, the leaders believed, would eliminate any probability of a serious contest over any special issue.

Democratic leaders were bombarded today by the suffragists whose carefully organized demonstration and presence are deeply felt. The suffragists plan to demand that the Democrats include a suffrage plank as a means of offsetting the Republican declaration on this subject. They assert that the Democrats should go further than the Republicans in an effort to secure the 3,000,000 women voters in the west.

Among the planks now under consideration by the leaders, which have been suggested by the president, are the following:

Latin-American—A resolution setting forth the efforts made through the recent Pan-American congresses and through visits by American officials and business men to South America to secure a closer relationship between the continents. This plan will include a statement as to the certainty of advantages to be secured by the cultivation of friendship and co-operation among all the South American republics.

Domestic Affairs—As suggested, this plank contemplates a rapid, point blank series of declarations as to the accomplishments of the administration. The improvement of banking conditions, the broadening of the trade relations with the country, the tariff and various other domestic accomplishments of the administration would be treated under this head.

Future Promises—This is suggested as a straightforward review of the legislative program of the Democrats with particular mention of:

Preparedness—Including the military and naval measures so far advanced by congress, as well as those measures which are now in the course of accomplishment.

Rural Credits—Setting forth in particular the Farm Loan Bank bill agreed on in congress.

Merchant Marine—Indorsing the administration's ship purchase bill and make clear the administration's purpose to get out of the shipping field as soon as private enterprise will develop the business to a point where government participation is unnecessary.

It is also proposed that the platform should state those things which the administration has in mind which have not yet been accomplished, such as adequate conservation legislation, reform of the rules of the senate to allow some sort of limitation on debate, and the creation of a tariff commission.

The repetition of planks in the 1912 platform, but briefly and only in exceptional cases, and a general endorsement of "fundamental party ideas as expressed in former platforms," completes the list of suggestions now before the leaders.

Another Quiet Night.

Monday was another quiet night in town and there were no police cases brought to the attention of Mayor Lang today.

PRESIDENT VISITS WEST POINT

By Telegram to The Freeman.
West Point, N. Y., June 13.—Amid the booming of the presidential salute of 21 guns, President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson arrived here at 9:30 o'clock this morning aboard the yacht Mayflower to attend the graduation exercises at the United States Military Academy. They were transferred from the yacht to shore in a launch. The Mayflower's guns responded to the salute.

Only Col. W. W. Harts, the president's military aide, and two secret service men accompanied the president and Mrs. Wilson from New York. When the president landed he was taken in an automobile to the stand from which he reviewed the cadets.

Following his address to the graduating class, the president will lunch with Col. C. P. Townsley, superintendent of the academy.

The presidential party will leave soon after 3 o'clock on a special train which will reach Washington about 10 o'clock tonight.

BORDER PREPARES TO RESIST ATTACK

By Telegram to The Freeman.
El Paso, Tex., June 13.—The grave uneasiness felt in Washington over the anti-American feeling in Mexico and the admission of lack of co-operation by Carranzistas is reflected along the border in preparations being made to resist an attack on American territory.

Advices from consuls in towns along the line of General Pershing's communications, and from travelers coming from Mexico are to the effect that the de facto forces are now moving towards the section occupied by United States troops indicating the possibility of an attack. Apprehension also is felt due to renewed raids in the Laredo region. Army officers today expressed conviction that Luis de la Rosa, the bandit, has obtained a promise of support from Carranzistas in any attack he may make upon Americans.

Every effort is being made by General Funston to so police the border as to prevent success of any plan formulated by de la Rosa.

Word has been received from Chihuahua that a Villa cache, containing twenty five million rounds of ammunition was discovered in a cave in northern Durango.

"If Villa was able to collect that many cartridges under disadvantages how much more has the Carranza forces?" said an army officer today.

It is generally believed the forces of the de facto have large stores of ammunition as they received many very large shipments before the embargo was established by the United States.

The final program of procedure for the convention assembling tomorrow was completed today. It is as follows:

Wednesday Noon—Convention called to order by William F. McComb, chairman of the Democratic national committee; call for the convention read by J. Bruce Kremer, acting secretary of the national committee; opening prayer by the Rev. J. W. Lee; temporary officers for the convention named; speech of Temporary Chairman Martin H. The question of how to raise a campaign fund, who should be selected to manage the campaign; whether the present should get in to the running and stamp the country or stay at home and receive delegations, thus emulating the example of the late President McKinley, were under discussion. And the be-bagged and important delegates with his friends in marching delegations who are relied on to start and keep up the enthusiasm—was here on the job. The leaders have decided to make it a real fight from the outset, and it is certain that no time will be devoted to "nice" talk.

It is now realized that with each side bidding for Progressive support, the initial advantage rests with Justice Hughes, whose cause has been espoused by the Progressive party leaders who are expected to accept the refusal of Col. Roosevelt to run and name the justice as his successor within a week after the pending Democratic national convention goes down into history.

Feelings sent out by certain of the Democratic steering committee have been intended to bring back into the Democratic party those Progressives who are Democrats, but the suggestion that the Democratic leaders believed they had a chance to get the bulk of the Progressives into their organization have been characterized as chimerical.

What the Democrats want is to retain within the party fold the Republicans who voted with them four years ago and to bring back the Democrats who deserted Governor Wilson to support Col. Roosevelt.

That an effort will be made to do this through the direct claim that the Democratic party is the party of progress was shown today when Senator Owen of Oklahoma declared he would ask the resolutions committee to define the difference between the Republican and the Democratic parties on welfare legislation and the like. He declared that while pointing with pride to its record of the last four years, the administration had the right also to direct attention to the fact that it had enacted into law during the last four years, or now is supporting, before Congress every bit of progressive legislation it had advocated since 1908.

Senator Owen, who is the author of a very comprehensive corruption act, intends also to ask that the resolutions committee go squarely on record as favoring a measure along the lines he is advocating. He has made it very plain that he considers such legislation absolutely imperative because of the intimations that a very large campaign fund will be raised to ensure the election of Justice Hughes.

WOODWORKING PLANT AGAIN TO BE IN OPERATION.

Home of the Hub Manufacturing Company, a Boston corporation which has removed its principal factory to Kingston, where its management states manufacturing and shipping conditions are little short of ideal for the woodworking industry. The concern will manufacture toilet seats and wood specialties. In bringing this plant to Kingston West Shore Freight Agent G. N. Wood gave valuable assistance, as did Frederick M. Snyder, who represented the owners of the plant which was formerly occupied by the Kingston Woodworking Company.

HUGHES BUSY IN NEW YORK

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 13.—Declaring he had had a good rest, and felt no ill effects from the strenuous day he had in yesterday in opening his campaign, Charles E. Hughes was up at 7 o'clock this morning in accordance with his usual custom. After breakfast in his suite on the eighth floor of the Hotel Astor, the Republican candidate for president descended to his headquarters on the first floor.

His first task was to attack a huge pile of letters and telegrams, all of which conveyed the well wishes of friends. They were sent from all parts of the country and from men in all stations of life.

In handling the mass of correspondence Mr. Hughes was aided by Lawrence Green, his secretary; Robert Fuller, who was his secretary when he was governor; W. R. Arndt, who will be his headquarters publicity man, and Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney who is acting as his aide.

Conferences with many political leaders are on the boards for today. Two important questions may be decided before the day is over. They are:

Where the formal notification of the candidate will take place.

Who will be chosen to lead the campaign.

Mr. Hughes is expected to stay in town until June 20 when he will go to Providence to attend the 35th reunion of the class of '81 at Brown University.

It is rumored that the notification ceremonies will take place on June 22.

Whether there will be a meeting between Mr. Hughes and Col. Roosevelt is problematical. The colonel came up from Oyster Bay today to attend to some literary matters, but would not discuss politics.

SUFFRAGE ACTIVITY AT ST. LOUIS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
St. Louis, Mo., June 13.—After two days of preliminary skirmishing women suffrage advocates today began a real drive on the Democratic national convention. The offensive is on two fronts. The Women's Party—led by some of the most prominent suffrage workers in America—is trying to force the Democrats to pledge the immediate adoption by congress of the Susan B. Anthony amendment, while the National Woman's Suffrage Association is demanding that the convention include in its platform a plank fully endorsing women's suffrage.

Though a majority of the Democratic leaders indicate that they will not seriously consider the woman's suffrage question, the leaders of the two organizations are confident they declare that the Democratic party, if it wishes success in November, must recognize and endorse woman suffrage. The two bodies are not working in conjunction but they are not interfering with each other's program and the delegates to the Democratic convention are being told plainly that "Votes for women" is one of the burning issues of the hour.

Representatives of the woman's party are conducting a vigorous "button-hole" campaign. Every person wearing the badge of delegate to the convention is held up and made to tell his stand on the woman's suffrage question. If this stand does not suit the delegate is bombarded with the most vigorous supply of logic that he has ever faced.

The suffragists plan their big demonstration tomorrow. That will be their "silent walk-less" parade. Thousands of women fighting for the ballot, garbed in white and wearing a yellow banner, will line the streets from the Hotel Jefferson—Democratic headquarters—to the Coliseum, where the convention will be held, the delegates will endeavor to pass the women and it is hoped by those in charge of the plan that the delegates will be so impressed by the demonstration that they will demand a strong endorsement of woman suffrage in the platform. The suffragists will not say a word. They have been instructed to stand and stare at the delegates as they pass.

Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch has arrived to reinforce the Woman's Party's workers. She is in a decidedly belligerent mood.

In no uncertain terms she declares that the Democratic party—if it hopes for success at the November election—must not only include a strong suffrage plank in the platform, but must guarantee that the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the constitution, giving women the right to vote, be passed at once by congress. She has made no threats but has taken pains to state that the women now living in states where they are allowed to vote are fighting the battle for their sisters in every state and that their votes may decide the next presidential campaign.

The belief is expressed by politicians here that the Democratic party will issue in its platform a plank similar to the one adopted by the Republicans endorsing woman suffrage by state legislation. Suffrage leaders, however, declare that this will not suffice and openly state that if the Democrats do not do better than this the support of the country's women voters may go to another candidate.

WIFE IS DYING, SEEK HUSBAND

While friends and relatives are searching for Miles Seaman, who is said to have vanished from his home in Ellenville on the night of Wednesday, May 17, his wife lies at the point of death in Newburgh hospital. Seaman, who was employed by the Ulster Knife Works, is said to have grown tired of work in the factory and gone to seek work on a farm. He has not since been heard of. The Seaman home in Ellenville, which is now unoccupied, is very cosy and both enjoyed it. Seaman also owns a horse and wagon, both of which are still at Ellenville and are being looked after by relatives. Seaman is said to have gone to Pine Bush where he was employed by Charles R. Reed, as a farm hand for a short time. He later left there and has not been heard of. Every effort is being made to locate the missing man.

Maxwell Allowed to Leave Jail.

After he had spent seventeen months in jail and had been tried twice for burglary without having been convicted, David Maxwell was given his liberty by County Judge Seeger in county court at Newburgh on Monday. Maxwell's release was asked by District Attorney Hirschberg, who said there was no new evidence against him and consequently no reason to believe a conviction could be obtained. Maxwell was arrested about a year and a half ago following a series of sensational postoffice, bank and store robberies in Orange county. He was suspected of being the leader of the gang of robbers who operated in automobiles. He was tried twice before for burglary but the evidence against him was flimsy and the jury disagreed both times.

They Have the Agency.

Robert Weston and John J. Kelly have taken the agency for the Schick paper haler and have been appointed sole representatives of Ulster county.

WORLD'S RECORD AT WOODCREST FARM

Woodcrest Ina De Kol 4th, 181529, a registered Holstein-Friesian cow, bred and owned by Woodcrest Farm, Rifton, on official test has just broken the world's 30 day butter record in the senior three-year-old class.

She freshened at the age of 3 years 9 months 19 days, dropping a beautiful heifer calf by King Walker 40258. Six days from calving she was started on official test and during 30 consecutive days she produced 2599.4 lbs milk, containing 143.97 lbs butter. This is a world's record at her age over all breeds. Her best seven day record was 618 lbs milk containing 34.56 lbs butter, made 16 days from calving. Her best single day was 105.9 lbs milk containing 4.006 lbs butter.

This is a very wonderful record, when you consider her age; but then the Woodcrest Farm herd, which is the best in Ulster county, contains only the highest record A. R. O. cows. World's records are broken by them every year. The management of Woodcrest Farm expects to make a 40 lb record on Woodcrest Ina De Kol 4th next year; and judging from her looks she is a very likely candidate for this high honor.

Senator Walton at Tannersville.

Senator Charles W. Walton will participate in the graduating exercises of the Tannersville High School, when on Wednesday evening, June 23, he will deliver an address in that place, as a part of the exercises which will be held during several days of the week.

PEACE PLANK IN ST. LOUIS PLATFORM

By Telegram to The Freeman.
St. Louis, June 13.—Hope for early cessation of the European war and for the restoration of world peace will be set forth in the Democratic national platform to be adopted by the convention which meets tomorrow. The peace plank will be added to the foreign relations declaration, the draft of which, written by President Wilson, was made public yesterday exclusively by the International News Service.

The suggestion that European peace be prayed for in the platform comes directly from President Wilson and it will probably be acceded to by the resolutions committee, which has the final word in framing the platform. The president's last word on the international planks in the tentative platform now under consideration will reach St. Louis tonight when Secretary of War Newton D. Baker arrives and it will cause the final revision of the declaration of party principles. While the essentials of the platform have been agreed upon, President Wilson may demand changes in the phraseology of various planks and party leaders are very willing to accept his dictum.

The probability of any long-prolonged or bitter fight on the resolutions committee or in the convention over the platform became more and more remote today. Members of the committee already selected were making every effort to placate seemingly obstreperous Democrats who wanted individual planks included in the platform. The proposal to incorporate a plank demanding that supreme court justices be barred from accepting any other political office, met with little favor among conservative Democrats, and it was practically settled that any fight made for this declaration would meet with little success. The arrival of William Jennings Bryan today was expected to bring to a focus the threatened trouble over Prohibition, woman suffrage and Philippine independence. Members of the resolutions committee declared that Mr. Bryan with all other advocates of special planks would be accorded a frank and full hearing. But it was clear that the final word on proposed declarations would have to come from the White House.

As a means of placating the Committee, it was suggested today that arrangements be made to secure unanimous consent for him to address the convention itself to present his views of any subject. Fair and liberal treatment of Bryan, the leaders believed, would eliminate any probability of a serious contest over any special issue.

Democratic leaders were bombarded today by the suffragists whose carefully organized demonstration and presence are deeply felt. The suffragists plan to demand that the Democrats include a suffrage plank as a means of offsetting the Republican declaration on this subject. They assert that the Democrats should go further than the Republicans in an effort to secure the 3,000,000 women voters in the west.

Among the planks now under consideration by the leaders, which have been suggested by the president, are the following:

Latin-American—A resolution setting forth the efforts made through the recent Pan-American congresses and through visits by American officials and business men to South America to secure a closer relationship between the continents. This plan will include a statement as to the certainty of advantages to be secured by the cultivation of friendship and co-operation among all the South American republics. A declaration reaffirming and strengthening the Monroe Doctrine has been suggested in connection with this plank.

Domestic Affairs—As suggested, this plank contemplates a rapid, point blank series of declarations as to the accomplishments of the administration. The improvement of banking conditions, the broadening of the trade relations of the country, the tariff, and various other domestic accomplishments of the administration would be treated under this head.

Future Promises—This is suggested as a straightaway review of the legislative program of the Democrats with particular mention of:

Preparedness—Including the military and naval measures so far advanced by congress, as well as those measures which are now in the course of accomplishment.

Rural Credits—Setting forth in particular the Farm Loan Bank bill agreed on in congress.

Merchant Marine—Indorsing the administration's ship purchase bill and make clear the administration's purpose to get out of the shipping field as soon as private enterprise will develop the business to a point where government participation is unnecessary.

It is also proposed that the platform should state those things which the administration has in mind which have not yet been accomplished, such as adequate conservation legislation, reform of the senate to allow some sort of limitation on debate, and the creation of a tariff commission.

The repetition of planks in the 1912 platform which should be reaffirmed, but briefly and only in exceptional cases, and a general endorsement of "fundamental party ideas as expressed in former platforms," completes the list of suggestions now before the leaders.

Another Quiet Night.

Monday was another quiet night in town and there were no police cases brought to the attention of Recorder Lang today.

Railway Clerks Strike.

Seventy-four men from Walden, Maybrook, Goheen, Middletown and Foughkeepsie, employed in the office of the Central New England railroad in Maybrook, went on strike Saturday afternoon following an attempt on the part of the railroad company to compel them to work thirty minutes more a day without a corresponding increase in wages.

Superintendent Clark of the railroad installed six girls and eight men at Maybrook to do the work.

PRESIDENT VISITS WEST POINT

By Telegram to The Freeman.
West Point, N. Y., June 13.—Amid the booming of the presidential salute of 21 guns, President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson arrived here at 3:30 o'clock this morning aboard the yacht Mayflower to attend the graduation exercises at the United States Military Academy. They were transferred from the yacht to shore in a launch. The Mayflower's guns responded to the salute.

Only Col. W. W. Harts, the president's military aide, and two secret service men accompanied the president and Mrs. Wilson from New York. When the president landed he was taken in an automobile to the stand from which he reviewed the cadets.

Following his address to the graduating class, the president will lunch with Col. C. F. Townsley, superintendent of the academy.

The presidential party will leave soon after 3 o'clock on a special train which will reach Washington about 10 o'clock tonight.

BORDER PREPARES TO RESIST ATTACK

By Telegram to The Freeman.
El Paso, Tex., June 13.—The grave uneasiness felt in Washington over the anti-American feeling in Mexico and the admission of lack of co-operation by Carranzistas is reflected along the border in preparations being made to resist an attack on American territory.

Advices from consuls in towns along the line of General Pershing's communications, and from travelers coming from Mexico are to the effect that the de facto forces are now moving towards the section occupied by United States troops indicating the possibility of an attack. Apprehension also is felt due to renewed raids in the Laredo region. Army officers today expressed conviction that Luis de la Rosa, the bandit, has obtained a promise of support from Carranzistas in any attack he may make upon Americans.

Every effort is being made by General Funston to so police the border as to prevent success of any plan formulated by de la Rosa.

Word has been received from Chihuahua that a Villa cache, containing twenty five million rounds of ammunition was discovered in a cave in northern Durango.

"If Villa was able to collect that many cartridges under disadvantages how much more has the Carranza forces," said an army officer today.

It is generally believed the forces of the de facto have large stores of ammunition as they received many very large shipments before the embargo was established by the United States.

The KITCHEN CABINET

PLEASING COMBINATIONS.

The shortest and surest way to live with honor in the world, is to be in reality what we would appear to be: all human virtues increase and strengthen themselves by the practice and experience of them.—Socrates.

There are such lovely colors in the fruits and vegetables which we put upon our tables that with a little taste and study of color combinations many artistic results may be obtained. We should be as careful about putting colors that clash, together in a dish of food, as we should in combinations of colors in wearing apparel.

As the eye is an important organ to please in regard to food, it is quite necessary that we prepare our food so that it appeals to the sight. Sameness and monotony are relieved by a touch of color in the garnish and dullness is relieved by contrast in the courses.

Few cooks ever make the mistake of serving the same food repeated in some other form in the meal, for example serving tomato soup and tomato salad; this occurs, however, often than it should.

A beef salad cut in small cubes, dressed with a boiled or a mayonnaise dressing that has been tinted with pink coloring, using some of the best water or a little vegetable color, is a most pleasing and appetizing dish.

A small crescent of lemon and a spray of parsley makes a most dainty garnish for a whitefish. For the fish course at dinner a crescent of potato rolled in chopped parsley furnishes the bit of vegetable that is always tasty with the fish. Another way to use lemon and parsley is to cut a thin slice, leaving on the colorful yellow peel and in the center of the slice heap a little finely minced parsley. Use these slices as a garnish on the platter with the fish.

Candied cranberries now take the place of the more expensive cherry either candied or in maraschino cordial; they are less expensive and without the reach of all and the color is fully as pretty.

A slice of tomato resting on a bed of water cress and a tablespoonful of finely cut cubes of cucumber mixed with onion heaped in the center of the slice is another example of the artistic and appetizing. Serve with French dressing.

THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA! The Inauguration of Another Epoch!

The Name Changing Sale Begins Thursday, June 15, 1916

YESTERDAY Kingstons Popular Store CARLS E.O. ROSE - V.A. GORMAN - A.E. ROSE

Since December, 1912, the HERBERT CARL DRY GOODS CO. has been owned and controlled by its present owners Messrs. E. O. Rose, A. E. Rose and V. A. Gorman. From the very beginning we have sought with the ready approval of the buying public to provide a store that would be second to none in any city of the size of Kingston. That we have done so is ably attested by the most favorable comments of visitors from far and near. Our business has increased rapidly—New departments have been added and the favor with which they have been met is decidedly gratifying to us.

TO-MORROW The Quality First Store ROSE-GORMAN-ROSE, INC. "FORMERLY CARLS"

We believe that the time has come when the facts of ownership and responsibility of this business should be apparent in its name. Hence the change of title. We are old fashioned enough to believe the public should know the personalities behind the business establishment which its favors with its patronage. The men whose names appear in the new title are its sole owners. They are known to most of the people of Ulster County. They wish to announce, that with the inauguration of the new title will be continued the policies of HIGHEST QUALITY MERCHANDISE at the LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES and YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU WANT IT which have done so much to build up this rapidly growing business—To these sound policies will be added the slogan. "QUALITY FIRST" IN EVERYTHING.

And Henceforth More Than Ever The R-G-R-Store Will Lead In Quality Merchandise

The KITCHEN CABINET

PLEASING COMBINATIONS.

The shortest and surest way to live with honor in the world, is to be in reality what we would appear to be; all human virtues increase and strengthen themselves by the practice and experience of them.—Socrates.

There are such lovely colors in the fruits and vegetables which we put upon our tables that with a little taste and study of color combinations many artistic results may be obtained. We should be as careful about putting colors that clash, together in a dish of food, as we should in combinations of colors in wearing apparel.

As the eye is an important organ to please in regard to food, it is quite necessary that we prepare our food so that it appeals to the sight. Sameness and monotony are relieved by a touch of color in the garnish and dullness is relieved by contrast in the courses.

Few cooks ever make the mistake of serving the same food repeated in some other form in the meal, for example serving tomato soup and tomato salad; this occurs, however, often than it should.

A beef salad cut in small cubes, dressed with a boiled or a mayonnaise dressing that has been tinted with pink coloring, using some of the best water or a little vegetable color, is a most pleasing and appetizing dish.

A small crescent of lemon and a spray of parsley makes a most dainty garnish for a whitefish. For the fish course at dinner a crescent of potato rolled in chopped parsley furnishes the bit of vegetable that is always tasty with the fish. Another way to use lemon and parsley is to cut a thin slice, leaving on the colorful yellow peel and in the center of the slice heap a little finely minced parsley. Use these slices as a garnish on the platter with the fish.

Candied cranberries now take the place of the more expensive cherry either candied or in maraschino cordial; they are less expensive and within the reach of all and the color is fully as pretty.

A slice of tomato resting on a bed of water cress and a tablespoonful of finely cut cubes of cucumber mixed with onion heaped in the center of the slice is another example of the artistic and appetizing. Serve with French dressing.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 13, 1916.

As for the vice-presidency, a republic that has contained itself with equanimity for the three years that Thomas Marshall of Indiana has rattled around in that office could view with content the advent of almost any nonentity that the Republicans could have disinterred at Chicago for the vice-presidential office. In the choice of Charles Warren Fairbanks, however, the convention displayed good judgment, as it has thus opposed to Marshall a personality shown by experience to be his temperamental opposite, and a capable presiding officer and statesman to boot. When we stop to take the measure of Marshall, not a lengthy matter either, in time or tape, it is easy to perceive how Fairbanks in his own way will be a tremendous asset to the ticket and as a vote-getter second only to his immediate superior. When the cartoonists once awaken to the full realization of the hirsute possibilities displayed by the candidates on one ticket, the inevitable caricatures may be expected and with precisely the same beneficial effect upon the supposed victims that such violations of good taste have always incurred in American political life.

It is a curious coincidence that both of the national candidates of the Republican party rejoice in the name of "Charles." That keen observer, Edgar Allan Poe, once wrote:

Now, whether it is a marvelous coincidence or whether it is that the name itself has an imperceptible effect upon the character, I have never yet been able to ascertain; but the fact is unquestionable that there never yet was any person named Charles who was not an open, manly, honest, good-natured, and frank-hearted fellow, with a rich, clear voice, that did you good to hear it, and an eye that always looked you straight in the face, as much as to say: "I have a clear conscience myself, am afraid of no man, and am altogether above doing a mean action."

If anything could destroy the usefulness of an inspection party probing into food conditions, advance notice of the swooping down of the investigators would seem to be that thing. Yet in New York after columns in the newspapers as to the militant intentions of the city health authorities, the city is treated to the spectacle of dozens of its restaurants being labelled "fair" and even "bad" in some instances by the inspecting squad of whose coming ample warning had been given. If this is the condition in the average eating place in the greater city after widest publicity has been given of a test of cleanliness of such establishments a decided boost will be given to the practice of carrying one's lunch as a measure of preparedness in sanitation. With soap and hot water (the latter one of the best of germicides) remaining unsurpassed in price by war demands it is difficult to see why a restaurant cannot clean up properly and keep cleaned up. But they do not. The condition is far from being new. Indeed, such exposures are mere matters of repetition. The only permanent change that seems imminent is a raise in prices which is ascribed to the extra expense in living up to the new demands of the health inspectors.

Courts are asked to accept so many statements on good faith without proof that judges sometimes become skeptical, and it is a wise lawyer who carries with him the evidence to back up his assertion. A Brooklyn lawyer found a judge regarding him incredulously when, as counsel in the only case ready for trial, he asked to have it postponed on the ground that his children were afflicted with whooping cough and he personally might be afflicted with the same ailment, whereupon he let out a few whoops which not only cleared the court room of spectators but caused the judge to direct a recess at once. This plan cannot always be followed, because statements occasionally have been found to be at variance with the facts. It is within the recollection of most lawyers in Ulster county that an application to put a criminal case over the term on the ground of the defendant's critical illness was followed the same day by the discovery that the defendant was enjoying himself with a party of friends at a local bar room. Such cases are unusual, however, and between the extremes which they furnish there is a medium representation of honest and fair excuses which are justified. All such excuses tend to delay the work of the courts and raise criticisms on the administration of justice, but more and more the judges and lawyers are working in co-operation to eliminate delays and procure speedy disposition of court cases. Unjust criticism produces contempt, but just criticism is conducive to better understanding and needed reform.

RUINS OF NINEVEH.

War in Mesopotamia Revives Interest in Ancient City.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, D. C., June 13.—The strong offensive developed recently by Russian forces operating against the desperately resisting Turks northwest of Bagdad has awakened a world-wide interest in this whole region of Mesopotamia and particularly in the ruins of the great city of Nineveh, lying just across the Tigris from Mosul and a probable battlefield during the Muscovite assault upon this Moslem key to the upper valley of the historic river. Concerning the ancient capital of Assyria and the manner in which its buried secrets have been brought to light within very recent times, Albert T. Cary, professor of Assyriology and Babylonian literature at Yale University, has sent a communication to the National Geographic Society, part of which was released today from the society's Washington headquarters, as a war geography bulletin. Prof. Cary writes:

"One of the romances of the last 75 years has been the unearthing of the remains of forgotten empires and the decipherment of their ancient records. A little over a half a century ago what was known concerning the ancient peoples of the nearer east, besides that which is contained in the Old Testament, could be written in a very brief form.

Israel was then regarded as one of the great nations of antiquity. Abraham belonged to the dawn of civilization. The references to other people in the Old Testament had little meaning, for few appreciated the fact that the history of many pre-Israelitish nations had practically faded from the knowledge of man. The pick and spade of the explorer, however, and the patient toil of the decipherer have thrown a flood of light upon the situation; ruins of the past have been opened up to the light of day, out of which emerge marvelous revelations in the form of written records and other remains.

"These, although written in languages and scripts the very existence of which was unknown to man for two thousand years or more, are now forced to reveal their story of religion, politics, science and life of not a few of the ancient and forgotten peoples.

"These researches have resulted in astounding revelations, Israel, instead of being one of the foremost nations of antiquity, is now found to have been a small power which had thrived in the late pre-Christian centuries, and had occupied a comparatively insignificant position among the great nations of the age. Instead of the patriarch Abraham belonging to the beginning of time, it is now found that he occupied a middle chapter in the history of mankind."

Prof. Cary tells of some remarkable documents found in the ruins of Nineveh's "congressional library," where manuscripts were catalogued and arranged according to subject matter, much as in our libraries of today. One clay tablet discloses the fact that "the sweetest story ever told" was told with the same fervor five thousand years ago as it is today. It is a lover's plaint, thus expressed: "To Bibbe, thus says Gimil Marduk: may the gods Shamash and Marduk permit thee to live forever for my sake. I write to inquire concerning thy health. Tell me how thou art. I went to Babylon, but did not see thee. I was greatly disappointed. Send the reason for thy leaving that I may be happy. Do come in the month of Marchesvan. Keep well always for my sake."

Whether Bibbe received this missive from her solicitous Gimil is not known, but she should have for there was an elaborate post system in that day and it is known that there were regular dispatches between some of the principal cities. Among the large amount of material unearthed have been many shipping tags made of clay. These have upon them the name and address of the party to whom the merchandise was sent.

If all the atrocious charges made against the various belligerents during the present world war were true and were multiplied a hundred fold they would not reach the cruelty attained by the famous king of Nineveh, Ashur-nasirpal III, whose own accounts of his refinement of art of torture have been unearthed beneath the very plain where Turk and Muscovite are now battling for possession of the cradleland of civilization. This king wrote concerning one of his captives: "To the city of Tela I approached. The city was very strong; three fortresses-walls surrounded it. The inhabitants trusted to their strong walls and their numerous army; they did not come down or embrace my feet. With battle and slaughter I attacked the city and captured it. Three thousand of their fighting men I slew with the sword; their spoil, their goods, their oxen and their sheep I carried away; many captives I burned alive. I captured many of their soldiers alive; I cut off the hands and feet of some; of others I cut off the noses, the ears and the fingers; I put out the eyes of many soldiers. I built up a pyramid of the living and a pyramid of heads. On high I hung up their heads on trees in the neighborhood of the city. Their young men and their maidens I burned with fire.

The city I overthrew and dug it up, and burned it with fire; I annihilated it."

A correspondent of the Geographic Society adds: "The imagination is staggered at the very thought of that pyramid of the living—human beings piled one upon another suffocating, struggling, perishing, slowly and miserably before that other pyramid of their more fortunate friends to whom death had come swiftly, and at the thought of that monster who not only did this, but gloried in it, and caused the story of his brutality to be written indelibly upon the walls of his house."

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"My poor fellow, have you been long out of work?" "I was born in '68, mum."—Boston Transcript.

"The trouble with most cities is that they take the buyer's attitude toward everything instead of the seller's. 'I don't get your meaning.' The buyer looks only for the flaws. But the seller looks for the good points and dwells upon them solely."—Detroit Free Press.

"What did the editor say when you read your poem to him?" "I can't repeat it," replied Mr. Peniggle. "But I will say that in his choice of language he took every advantage of the fact that his words were not intended for print."—Washington Star.

Valued Service.

President John Grier Hibben of Princeton was talking at a luncheon about preparedness. "Preparedness is our duty," he said. "If we don't prepare we will find ourselves in a fearful trouble. The man who in these cyclonic times opprobrium is apt to get the worst of it, like Jones. Jones, a fat, steady-going clerk, had worked for the same firm 17 years. A new hand, a nervous young fellow, complained to him one day: 'I've been here six months now, and it's time I had a raise.' 'Oh, keep your hair on, said Jones. 'I was here two years before I got my first raise. Just plug away patiently, my boy—that's the way to get on. By the way, what is your salary anyhow?' 'Only $29,' said the younger man. 'Holy smoke!' roared Jones. 'And mine is $15.'"

A Place for Malachi.

A dry preacher in some remote part of the country had a fairly large congregation on a very hot day. His subject was merely the prophets, their message, and so on. He went through the Old Testament, giving to each prophet his place of honor and appreciation. Finally, reaching the last book of the Old Testament he demanded, "And now we come to Malachi. What shall we do with Malachi? What place shall we give Malachi?" An old woman arose to depart. "Malachi can have my place!" she said.—The Christian Herald.

No Reason Why.

"Your aristocratic American millionaire will often make a mess of a marriage with a chorus girl or a parlor maid. But I notice that your aristocratic American millionaire, always keeping her head, makes a good match."

The speaker was Mme. Montessori, the Italian educator. She continued: "Out my way hither on the boat there was a beautiful American heiress, to whom a young magazine writer from the West paid assiduous court. But he, on account of the low rates of the magazines was as poor as a church mouse, and so the heiress would not consider him seriously."

"As they leaned side by side over the rail one afternoon the heiress, looking out over the rolling blue water, sighed and said: 'I love the sea.' 'The impoverished and embittered magazine writer retorted with a sneer: 'I don't see why. It hasn't got any money.'"

Sympathy.

A little boy in a nature study class had been impressed by his teacher's talk on being kind to all animals. While out walking with his teacher one day he became tired and sat down. A few minutes later his companion was startled by a terrific scream. Upon being asked what was the matter, he answered, tearfully: "I've been sitting on a hornet, and I'm afraid that I've hurt the poor thing."

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Taking our minds for a while from politics," said the street corner politician, "let us consider something of equal importance to the householder, and that is the backyard garden. Now is the time of the year when the amateur gardener spends considerable time in the yard surveying the fruit of considerable labor and energy and wondering if the cold and inclement weather of the past several weeks is not retarding the growth of the tomato plants, the radishes and other luxuries that he has planted, literally in most cases, by the sweat of his brow.

"Now in my case it was the act of a beneficent government that gave me my first attack of 'gardenitis,' for I shall never forget the look of surprise and joy that illumined my features when the postman left a package in my mail box postmarked by Uncle Sam and addressed to me. With trembling fingers I opened that fateful package and found free garden seed. Yes, that was the initial stage of the disease for thought I if my government thinks enough of me to send ME a package of garden seed why it is up to me to put them to some use.

"As I was not much inclined toward manual labor I engaged a neighboring workman to spade up the lot of ground that I had allotted for the government seed. If I remember correctly I paid the man $3 for that job, as I had never had such work done before and I did not want to give him the impression that there was anything mean about me. I might add that the plot of ground he spaded up for me was six by twelve feet, and I have never had the nerve to broach the subject to the man to ascertain if I did not pay him the man enough or if I overpaid him—but what is $3 compared to the fact that our government had sent me some free seed.

"After the man had spaded up my garden he asked me if I wanted him to plant it for me, but I waved him aside with a grand air which comes naturally to me and said that I would do my own planting.

"I did."

"Now while I do not like to raise objections or look free seed in the mouth, yet after this when free seed distribution time rolls around I believe I will be tempted to take it up with my government and ask them when they send me seed again to be sure and select seed that can be used in a small garden.

"The radish seed they sent me was all right, but I had no room for sweet corn or squashes, while by the time I had got my tomato plants set out—I bought the tomato plants—I did not have room for the rest of the seed.

"Judging from what has occurred so far it might be well that I did not have the room. My radishes have appeared above the ground, but it seems to me that they are rather bashful in making an appearance for the two rows I planted are not filled out at all.

"I gaze anxiously every night at the two rows where I planted the government onion seed, but although it has been in the ground for a full month the only green things I can see is some weeds.

"The reason that I planted the onions next to the radishes was because I had read somewhere that the onions would make the radishes' eyes water and I thought in case I forgot to sprinkle the garden that that would help out.

"But as the onions have not come up I must not forget to water the garden regularly although the rainy weather of the past several days has not made that necessary.

"Maybe those onion seed, being from the government are of the watchful waiting type and thinking that this weather was not of the best have decided to wait until next year to come up. While watchful waiting is well enough in the case of garden seed, still I believe in preparedness, and I have made arrangements with a fruit dealer to have his delivery wagon stop daily at my house to keep us supplied in fresh fruit and vegetables.

"When I started my garden with free government seed I had an idea that I would not have to buy any vegetables this summer.

"They tell me that all amateur gardeners hold that belief."

He worked till 9:30, then had his supper. At four the next morning he was called to get up. He ate a hearty breakfast, then started upstairs again, saying: "This is the best place I ever worked—two suppers in one night and back to bed again."

COMPANY M WANTS RECRUITS

Captain Frank L. Meagher of Company M has been notified by the National Guard officers to recruit the company to its war strength of 150 men, and officers will be at the armory every night this week to receive and examine recruits, who will also undergo the physical examination by the company's surgeon.

The recruiting to full strength is desired in order that Company M will be on an equal footing with other National Guard organizations when it goes to state camp on July 8. The officers and men of the company now number 98. The recruiting must be done before June 20.

Camp life this year will be unusually interesting. The state camp will be established on the reservation owned by the state at Beekman, N. Y., which is twenty-five miles from Peekskill. It is planned to have the organization detrain at Peekskill and march to Beekman in a three days' march, which will be an entirely new feature, a new camp being established each night.

The camp will last for two weeks. The first week will be devoted to regimental work, and the second week to maneuvers, and the instruction will be far superior to that enjoyed by National Guard organization in past years.

The opportunity for camp life is eagerly sought by men everywhere. The work is not nearly as hard as it is at the Business Men's Training Camp at Plattsburg, and affords a vacation with just enough work to put a man in first class physical condition. Members receive pay from the time they leave the city until they return.

Garage Owners Combine.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 13.—Evidence that automobile garage owners in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and several other large cities in the United States are attempting to form a big combination for the handling of gasoline is in the hands of federal trade commission. This was brought out at the hearing being held today in connection with the commission's investigation into the increase in the price of gasoline. The garage men are determined to make every effort to control the retail price of gasoline within their particular districts, according to the evidence. The move is being justified on the ground that the Standard Oil and the independent oil companies have attempted to drive the garage men out of the trade by establishing their own gasoline stations to sell direct to the motorists. The garage men say they must combine in self-defense.

The Terry Badly Damaged.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 13.—Rear Admiral Caperton at Santo Domingo City today reported to the navy department that the destroyer Terry, which ran aground at Puerto Plata, Santo Domingo, was so badly damaged that she will have to be taken in charge by a wrecking crew. One whole side of the vessel was torn open. A wrecking crew from Kingston, Jamaica, has been ordered to proceed to the Terry. Admiral Caperton said the Kentucky landed an additional company of marines at Santo Domingo City yesterday.

Moline Moulders Strike.

Thirty-eight moulders and core-makers at the Moline Plow Company at Poughkeepsie walked out Monday morning in a demand for a slight increase in their wages. The men are all piece workers and many of them are old employees of the firm. The core-makers demand one cent increase on each core made, while the floor men or moulders ask for two cents increase.

His Wife Ran Away From Him.

Claiming that his wife had run away from home and was in hiding in Newburgh, Olive Phillips, colored, of Montgomery, went there on Saturday night in search of the woman. He found her in a hotel and after some excitement she agreed to return home with him.

POSTMASTER DEYO SEEMS PEEVED

Reacts Effort of Chamber of Commerce to Have Inadequate Mail Service Improved, According to Letter Received.

That you cannot criticize a public institution and at the same time expect the good will of its chief officer is the novel proposition which staggered Chamber of Commerce directors Monday night when a letter, presumably from S. R. Deyo, postmaster, was read before the meeting. As the letter, published herewith, shows the postmaster is angry because the chamber sought to improve the mail service. In reply to his charge that no complaints were voiced to him, President Leighton and Secretary Canfield both stated that they had called on the postmaster and found him unable to be seen, but that they had left word with the nurse as to their mission so that in stating he had not been consulted, Mr. Deyo was in error.

Some of the directors were of the opinion that the postmaster was not in his normal health and the secretary suggested that the press withhold any mention of the matter whatever. This was resented by some of the directors who made plain the fact publicly never hurt any just cause. Finally, by unanimous vote the letter was given to the press. It is self-explanatory. The letter is as follows:

United States Post Office,
Kingston, N. Y., May 13, 1916.
Chamber of Commerce,

Gentlemen:—I received your circular letter, also your booklet, but you have not received my check as yet and you are not going to receive it. I think you have a pretty good nerve to ask me to do so after finding as much fault as you have with the service of the P. O. which is as good as it ever was previously. When you find fault with this P. O. you find fault with me. I should judge my check would be distasteful to you.

You never consulted me over this matter one bit but took it up through Congressman Ward before you took it up through anyone. After that you took it up through Mr. Irwin before you even came near me. I hope Congressman Ward will be successful and get it through for you, but I think we will all know more about it before he does. There will be no check forthcoming from me this season and I want you to take my name as a member of the Chamber of Commerce. Neither will there be a check coming from the S. R. Deyo Co. Clean your slate from the bad people that give you bad service.

Yours very truly,
S. R. DEYO,
Postmaster.

CONTROL OF CUTWORMS.

How to Protect Gardens And Fields From This Pest.

Foliage, flowers, buds, fruit, stalks and roots are the food of cutworms, whose busy season is the spring and summer time. Some reports of the work of cutworms have been received but there is no indication that they are exceptionally prevalent this year. Commissioner of Agriculture Charles S. Wilson states that the department of agriculture will give information in detail on the cutworm to those who make application for it, and directions as to the best methods of eliminating or controlling it where extraordinary problems arise.

The cutworm is a night worker like others of his species but he is able to do a large amount of damage to growing crops from dusk until sunrise in his short life. Because he works mostly in the night his presence is sometimes not noted until it has been observed that something is eating down the cabbage plant as it is struggling up out of the ground in the garden, or that he is doing the same to some other plant.

The cutworm is cylindrical in shape with a reddish brown head. When full grown in the summer, the worm is about one and one-half inches long and is of a dull brown, gray or blackish color, sometimes tinged greenish and is more or less marked with longitudinal stripes, oblique dots and dashes. The adults are moths with dark forewings and lighter hindwings. Like the cutworms, they feed at night. The females deposit their eggs in the late summer in grass land or where a crop has been allowed to grow up in grass and weeds. The caterpillars hatch from these eggs in August and September, feed on the roots of whatever vegetation is available until frost, when they hibernate in the ground. The next spring they come out of their winter quarters and attack vegetation. If the land is in grass or weeds and is plowed and planted, the cutworms are likely to greatly damage the crop. They eat growing plants even to the ground and hence their name.

Methods of Control.

Plowing in the late fall and plowing and harrowing thoroughly early in the spring, so as to keep the land fallow, starves out the cutworm. Poisoned bran-mash may be used. If it is well applied a few days before plants are set, or a few days after seed is planted, it will often protect crops on infested land. On corn land it may be applied with a seed drill, and in gardens an onion drill is sometimes used. A tablespoonful of it may be applied by hand near each plant or every two or three feet in a row. The mash should be distributed late in the afternoon, so it will be moist when the worms feed at night. Poultry must be kept away from fields so treated. Clover that has been sprayed or dipped in a barrel of water in which one-third of a pound of Paris green has been placed may be used. Where the cutworms climb and attack fruit trees, the bran mash may be distributed around the bases, or a band of tanglefoot will stop them. A collar of cotton batting or wool on trunks of trees or around grapevines makes a cheap barrier against the worms.

The bran-mash is made as follows: One pound of Paris green or London purple to twenty-five pounds of bran or middlings; stir a quart or two of cheap molasses in a gallon of water and moisten the bran. Do not add so much water that the bran will be thin and cake when exposed.

New Telephone Cable Under River.

With the laying of a cable carrying 200 separate pairs of telephone wires across the Hudson river between Beacon and Newburgh started by men of New York Telephone Company on Monday the last link in the longest toll telephone cable in the world is now practically completed. For several weeks the telephone people have been enclosing the toll wires between Newburgh and New York in a cable.

Two Roseton Men Hurt.

When the lever of a jack slipped at the Rose Brick Company's yard at Roseton on Saturday it struck Howard Bell, 23 years old, in the jaw. James Sullivan of Beacon from the brickyard of the Arrow Brick Company near Roseton was also injured about the head the same day, but was unable to tell how he got hurt. Both men were taken to St. Luke's Hospital at Newburgh.

VAN WAGENEN'S

MRS. HAZEL FURMAN & 'VOTES'. (Anti Film Service.)
BIRD BALLYHOO LAUGHED AT 'ANTI' AND WAS BARRED FROM PARADE.

"Votes," the only bird ballyhoo for suffrage in the world, was banished from suffrage parade headquarters in Chicago, because he laughed at an anti who was just on the point of being converted to the cause.

"Votes" job was to sit on a golden perch near the door and urge all women passing along Michigan avenue to "Come in and sign up for the parade."

His siren call lured a middle-aged anti inside the door, and she was just getting interested in an explanation of the big parade when "Votes" laughed at her. She departed in a huff. "Votes" followed in a few minutes in a yellow taxi, the suffragists fearing that his sense of humor might deprive them of more converts.

The bird's owner is Mrs. Hazel Furman, a youthful Chicago suffragist.

WE ARE ON TRAIL TO YELLOWSTONE

Good Road From Plymouth Rock to Puget Sound is Now Complete—A Picturesque Scenic Highway Across Continent.

The Yellowstone Trail Association today announced its extension from Chicago to the Atlantic Coast at Plymouth, Massachusetts. The route is as follows:

From Chicago to Hammond, Indiana; Hammond to Port Wayne, Indiana, via Valparaiso, Plymouth, Warsaw, Pierceton and Columbia City; Port Wayne to Akron, Ohio, via Hicksville, Fremont, Bowling Green, Napoleon and Norwalk; Akron to Kingston, N. Y., via Warren, Ohio; Kingston to Oil City, Pa.; Oil City to Elmira, Binghamton and Unadilla, N. Y.; Kingston to Plymouth, Massachusetts, via Salisbury, Norfolk, Hartford and Putnam, Conn.; Providence, Rhode Island; Taunton and Middleboro, Massachusetts.

This alignment of towns was selected by the Yellowstone Trail only after long study of the situation, and a personal view of the roads by agents of the Yellowstone Trail, and the work of marking the new road with the official mark of the Yellowstone Trail, will be begun at once.

The Yellowstone Trail is the one transcontinental highway organization that has a definite and fixed organization. It is incorporated and maintains its own general offices at Aberdeen, South Dakota, with a complete staff devoted to the work of promoting this highway exclusively. It is the only road in the country which maintains an active and cohesive organization from one coast to the other.

The mark of the trail is a yellow circle with a black arrow pointing toward the Yellowstone National Park. Where turns are marked, an R or L is used instead of the arrow.

In connection with the foregoing announcement from the Yellowstone Trail News Bureau, the Chamber of Commerce on Monday night referred the question of co-operation with the project to the Good Roads Committee. It being claimed that Middle-town and Poughkeepsie were seeking the highway. Judging from the above, however, Kingston is already on the map.

FIELD OF SPORTS.

Notes of Baseball, Pugilism and Other Lines of Athletics.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, June 13.—Big Ed Walsh is nothing if not courageous. The veteran will attempt a come-back to-day and his opponent will be no other than Walter Johnson. It will be the acid test for Walsh. If he wins, a regular place on the Sox hurling corps will be his once more.

New Orleans, June 13.—Pete Herman outpointed Frankie Brown in 15 rounds here last night.

New York, June 13.—Many fight fans today held that Benny Leonard shaded Johnny Dundee in their ten round encounter here last night, while an equal number were positive that Dundee earned the honors. The neutrality division of fight fans declared the contest a draw.

The bout teemed with action. Leonard was the aggressor in the early rounds, but toward the finish Dundee assumed the offensive and appeared the stronger of the two when the final gong clanged.

JOE WRIGHT.

QUAKER COACH DROPS ENTIRE VARSITY CREW.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 13.—Joe Wright, coach of the University of Pennsylvania oarsmen, performed the most drastic action of any varsity coach now in the rowing colony here. With the big race about a week off, Wright, transplanted the entire junior varsity crew, oarsmen, coxswain, shell and all, into the position of first varsity and it is expected that the junior will row as the varsity in the race on June 16.

The juniors had defeated the regular varsity with such regularity that Wright came to the conclusion that it would be more representative of Penn's best oarsmanship and would have a better chance of winning than the men of the regular varsity.

MOTORCYCLE AND AUTOMOBILE COLLIDE

Frederick A. Gerhardt Slightly Injured When His Motorcycle Collided With Ice Cream Truck of James Miller on Broadway.

Frederick A. Gerhardt, chauffeur for George Washburn, narrowly escaped serious injury on Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock when the motorcycle he was riding ran into the large ice cream truck of James Miller, the Broadway confectioner. At the time of the accident Mr. Gerhardt was riding down Broadway while the ice cream truck was turning into the yard at Miller's store on Broadway. The motorcycle hit the truck near the forward wheel and rebounded hurling Gerhardt off. Fortunately he escaped with a severe shaking up and bruises about the body. He was assisted into the Bonartz drug store nearby and his injuries were attended by Dr. Bonartz. He was later taken to his home on East Chester street. The motorcycle was somewhat damaged by the collision.

In Case of Accident.

A crushed finger should be plunged into water as hot as can possibly be borne. The application of hot water causes the nail to expand and soften and the blood pouring out beneath it has more room to flow; thus the pain is lessened. The finger should then be wrapped in a bread-and-water poultice. A jammed finger should never be neglected, as it may lead to mortification.

CUCUMBER MOSAIC DISEASE.

Popularly Termed "White Pickle" and "Nubbins."

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., June 13.—A new disease of cucumbers, known as the mosaic disease, has appeared during the past few years in commercial greenhouses and in fields where cucumbers are grown for pickling purposes. The disease has been known longest and is now most widespread and severe in the middle west, where the industry of growing cucumbers for pickling is centered, particularly in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, and Minnesota. In greenhouses, the disease was reported from Illinois as early as 1908, and is known to occur to a more or less limited extent in New York, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, and other states. Recent investigations of the disease have resulted in the discovery of its nature, that it is closely related to mosaic disease of other plants, and the present indications are that it can be controlled by the introduction of sanitary measures and insect control methods. Further experiments with control measures are being carried out.

Appearance of Diseased plants.

The mosaic disease is commonly known in Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin as "white pickle." In Minnesota it is commonly called "nubbins." The disease is characterized in the field by definite plant, fruit and leaf symptoms. When plants are attacked while very young, they are markedly dwarfed by the action of the disease, growth is slow, the runners are very much shortened, the leaves are correspondingly reduced in size, the plants blossom sparingly, and the amount of fruit is very much reduced. When older plants become diseased the principal visible effects are on the subsequent growth of vines and fruit, the vine tips and leaves being dwarfed and mottled and the fruit malformed as described elsewhere.

The leaves of diseased plants are dwarfed, often curled and wrinkled, and usually have a mosaic of light and dark green alternate. In some cases the leaves brown and die back from the tip.

The fruits are very conspicuously affected, being dwarfed, more or less mottled or blotched with areas of darker green on a background of light green, greenish yellow, or almost white. In the most decided cases the green areas are raised and appear as definite warts or protuberances, sometimes of considerable size, and the fruits take on many abnormal shapes. In some cases the fruits are almost white, hence, the name "white pickle." This name probably is due to a confusion of this diseased condition with the white or albino plants which typically bear white-colored pickles, and which have been known to occur occasionally in fields for many years.

The discoloration and warty condition of the fruits, which often appear on cucumbers not more than an inch or two long, render them unfit for pickling purposes, so that in addition to the great reduction in yield caused by the disease, many, if not all, of the fruits produced by diseased vines are unmarketable.

In the greenhouse the disease is quite similar in its principal symptoms to those found in the field, the principal differences being that the disease appears to be more virulent, many of the plants wilting and dying.

Nature of the Disease.

The mosaic disease has recently been studied by the Michigan Experiment Station in co-operation with the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and by the University of Rochester in co-operation with the Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station and its nature discovered. It belongs to the same class as the other mosaic diseases of tobacco, potato, tomato, poke weed, and other plants, which have been known for some time. The exact cause of this class of trouble has not been discovered, but it is considered to be what is known as a filterable virus, an agent of infection which is so finely divided that it will pass through a porcelain filter and still retain its ability to reproduce the disease when injected into healthy plants. The sap or juice of any portion of a diseased vine if injected into a healthy vine will produce the disease. The period of incubation, that is, the time which elapses from the inoculation of the vine to the first visible symptoms of the disease, in the greenhouse is from 7 to 14 days, while in the field it is usually 14 to 25 days. The agencies of transmission of the disease from diseased to healthy plants are doubtless many. It has been definitely proven that plants lice transferred from diseased to healthy plants will carry the disease. It is highly probable that other insects will be found to act as carriers. It is also practically certain that the disease is spread by pickers when harvesting the cucumbers.

Control Measures.

Judging from the nature of the disease and from the preliminary experiments thus far carried out, the remedial measures indicated by our present knowledge are (1) the eradication or control of insect pests which act as carriers of the disease, and (2) the application of sanitary measures to eliminate the sources of infection. To be most effective, these methods must be carried out by all the farmers of a community.

Rigid insect control measures should be started as soon as the plants are up and continued throughout the season. The fields should be gone over repeatedly throughout the season, especially previous to the beginning of picking, and all mosaic diseased plants pulled and destroyed, as well as plants with which they have come in contact.

Owing to the fact that greenhouse conditions are much more completely under control than field conditions, it would seem an easier task to control the disease there. As previously stated for field control, all diseased plants should be pulled and destroyed as soon as found and the insects should be eradicated to prevent their spreading the disease.

THAT WHICH LASTS.

"The only thing that walks back from the tomb and refuses to be buried is character." That is true. What a man survives him. It never can be buried. It stays about the home when his footsteps are heard there no more. It lives in the community where he was known; hence we should take care to build into our character only good and beautiful things.

NEW STYLE AUSTRALIAN PERISCOPE

AUSTRALIANS USE NEW STYLE PERISCOPE IN FRENCH TRENCHES.

The picture shows a "reflecting mirror" periscope in use by the Australians, who have just taken possession of their trenches in northern France and Flanders. This periscope is set at the back of the trench instead of at the front, as is the case with other styles. In the picture the backs of the men are toward the enemy, whom they are observing in the little mirror. Note that the Australians have been furnished with the steel "trench" helmet, which practically all of the belligerents now wear as a protection against bursting shrapnel.

BRINGING PREACHING UP TO THE TIMES

Dr. Ellis, of the Rondout Presbyterian Church considered on Sunday evening the answers of the representative men of Kingston to his question, "What doctrines or truths need especially to be preached by the pulpit?"

These answers fell into three general classes. 1st, those who laid the emphasis upon morality and ethical teaching, calling for short attractive sermons on practical things of every day life, not doctrines or truths, but tolerance, love of fellowmen and the elimination of hell and its fires.

Second. Those that laid the emphasis upon the personal Christ and His teachings, both with and without strictures upon doctrine and dogma; "the gospel of a smile and of the Christian's duty to make others happy as himself." Some called for a "Strong Gospel, less theology. 'No doctrines,' said another, 'but the eternal truth that God is love.' Emphasis was also laid upon the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Another would lay emphasis upon 'The masculinity of Jesus.'"

Third. By far the larger part, however, believed in the emphasis upon the great doctrines, such as "The sinfulness of man, the atonement of the Saviour, the Lord's return, justification by faith, the divine sovereignty, God's holiness and justice." "The doctrine of the obligation to give God the first place in our lives," one said. "The doctrine of man's insufficiency; righteousness exalting a nation; the need of vision; justice; honesty; how easy to fall, how hard to climb, but the view is always worth the struggle; God is; responsibility; accountability; imperishability; God and the world one." This last statement not meant to be monistic but to imply that God is in immediate relationship to the world and its order. One while not holding to a literal acceptance of the Bible lays emphasis upon the fact that "differences of opinion as to the literal facts of the Bible do not affect the moral truths. That God lives just as truly even though the conception of Him is being constantly changed," he says, "should be made very plain."

After considering these answers in some detail, Dr. Ellis raised the question as to the meaning and import of the term doctrine. While many lay strictures on the teaching of doctrines, when they insist upon no doctrines but the preaching of a strong gospel, they are both affirming and denying doctrines. Anyone who has convictions formulates for himself doctrines and if he attempts to speak his convictions must express his doctrines. What are the great doctrines of the church? They are not simply the teachings of Scripture, but these teachings as tested and experienced by the church in the past. They are the effort of great thinkers to express their convictions and experiences in concise terms.

What are the limitations of doctrine? The danger of holding and teaching doctrines of the past is that they may become forms of thought only. Thus they may become restraints to all spiritual life and progress. They become the fruitful source of bigotry and false spiritual pride, a clog to the church and a stumbling block to honest men who ought to be in the church. It is my firm conviction that the old great and strong doctrines represent fundamental truths and that each of these doctrines is capable of interpretation into modern language and experience.

In order to be preached effectively the doctrines must be vitalized by human experience. They must be brought down to date. A few years ago perhaps the most talked of man in the Christian world was Henry Drummond, and this is just what Drummond did: Being a modern, progressive thinker, somewhat of a scientist and a student of biology, he interpreted Christian doctrine in terms of natural law and evolution.

The great periods of revival and reformation have ever been periods of doctrinal preaching. Did John Calvin, did Martin Luther, did John Knox, did Wesley or Edwards or Whitfield preach doctrine? Men are moved to action by conviction. Even the Christian Scientists teach doctrine. No, people do not shrink from doctrine, only they want the doctrine to represent honest belief and human experience.

Now has the church a system of doctrine that is needed by the world? Has it a system that it has not only formulated but which it believes? Throughout the world today may be found the church back of every great reform and regenerating influence, in heathen lands establishing hospitals and schools, breaking the caste system of India and emancipating the women of the Mohammedan harem.

"Jesus said: 'The words that I have spoken unto you are spirit and are life.' That is the saving message of Jesus. His experience of God and His message to men are life, and the doctrines of the church represent man's best effort to translate the message of Jesus to men."

COMMON AMERICAN BIRDS

INTERESTING INFORMATION ABOUT THEM SUPPLIED BY THE BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL SURVEY OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

LOGGERHEAD SHRIKE

(Lanius ludovicianus)

Length, about nine inches. A gray, black, and white bird, distinguished from the somewhat similarly colored mockingbird by the black stripe on side of head.

Range: Breeds throughout the United States, Mexico, and southern Canada; winters in the southern half of the United States and in Mexico.

Habits and economic status: The loggerhead shrike, or southern butcher bird, is common throughout its range and is sometimes called "French mockingbird" from a superficial resemblance and not from its notes, which are harsh and unmusical. The shrike is naturally an insectivorous bird which has extended its bill of fare to include small mammals, birds, and reptiles. Its hooked beak is well adapted to tearing its prey, while to make amends for the lack of talons it has hit upon the plan of forcing its victim, if too large to swallow, into the fork of a bush or tree, where it can tear it asunder. Insects, especially grasshoppers, constitute the larger part of its food, though beetles, moths, caterpillars, ants, wasps, and a few spiders are also taken. While the butcher bird occasionally catches small birds, its principal vertebrate food is small mammals, as field mice, shrews, and moles, and when possible it obtains lizards. It habitually impales its surplus prey on a thorn, sharp twig, or barb of a wire fence.

SCHOOL FIELD DAY AT ELLENVILLE

Ellenville, June 13.—In spite of the unfavorable weather conditions which prevented as large an attendance as was expected, the first annual field day held on the high school grounds Saturday, June 10, was a pronounced success. A large number of boys and girls competed in the badge contest and other special events. Among the successful features of the day was the old English May Pole dance given by the pupils from the junior high school under the direction of Miss Helen Shepherd. The children of the first and second grades engaged in bean bag throwing, a chicken race and a farmers' race. Results in the various events follow: The following boys from the grades qualified for the first badge: Frank Barber, Jacobus Elting, Richard Glennon, Andrew Hoffman, Irving Lake, George Rosenberger, Samuel Smuckler, Nathan Steinhoff, Samuel Steinhoff, Milford Traphagen, Matthew Van Keuren, Jr. Open standing broad jump for grade boys: George Rosenberger, first; Matthew Van Keuren, second; Samuel Steinhoff, third; distance, 7 feet, 6 inches. CONVENTION SIDE LIGHTS
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
St. Louis, June 13.—Oklahoma has a "favorite son" in the vice-presidential sweepstakes. He is Senator Owen, and the delegates from the wind-swept state claim he is going to be a real factor.
New Jersey bore down on St. Louis today almost en masse. The "Skeeter" delegation headed by Edward E. Grosscup, is occupying forty one rooms at the Planters Hotel.
The scores of newspaper correspondents who are here today are recovering from one of the greatest shocks of their young and old lives. August A. Busch sent word to press headquarters that all the writers were to be his guests. There was a mad scramble to get work out of the way. The name Busch caused some excitement. There were visions of a trip to a nice, cool, brewery—St. Louis is a hot town—and the scribes were all on hand. Judge the disappointment when it was discovered that the brewery was not on the line of march. The trip was to Mr. Busch's country place. Most of the party perked up considerably, as the supply of mint juleps was inexhaustible.
Every color and shape in Palm Beach suits is seen in and around the hotels of St. Louis. One however, stood out from the rest. It was worn by an alternate from New York, and was bright green, with a red cuff on the trousers. He claimed to be "away ahead of the style." He was—and there does not seem to be any inclination to catch up.
Not all of the visiting correspondents went on the auto trip given to the newspaper men. Some had to stay in town and write side lights.
Governor Major of Missouri, has a silk hat following which is boosting him for the vice-presidential nomination. Its only rival in head-tie piece attractive is in the Iowa delegation whose members wear straw hats with bright orange bands around them.
Ticket speculators are offering "best seats" at the convention for $25. In Chicago, before the rain spoiled the thing, the scalpers placed a price of $200 on single seats to the Republican show.
The rapidity with which the vice-presidential list is growing seems to foreshadow a favorite son hope in every state delegation by Friday. It means more nominating speeches, more dramatic withdrawals, with the result never for a moment in doubt—Marshall.

The interest of the Germans of the country in the convention, and particularly in the platform is seen in the sending of a corps of German reporters to "cover" the proceedings. One of the German newspapermen had a tough time last night. He had written a detailed story of pre-convention happenings and then, when he tried to wire it to his paper in Chicago, could not find a telegrapher who was able to use the German code. The result was that he was compelled to resort to the telephone.
There are almost as many "favorite son" candidates for the supreme court cap and gown cast aside by Justice Charles E. Hughes as there were in the Republican convention last week. Two of today's "nominations" for the place include W. W. Graves, chief justice of the Missouri supreme court and Alexander F. Reichmann, of Chicago.
Miles of red, white and blue bunting garlanded the heart of St. Louis today and hundreds of men were at work putting into place thousands of more yards of the national colors in honor of the visiting Democratic hosts.

SET FIREWORKS OFF ON BOAT

Members of the Christian Endeavor Union of New York city gave the officers and crew of the Day Line steamer Hendrick Hudson a scare on Saturday, when in the course of a frolic they started to discharge fireworks on the boat, and those in charge feared the boat would be set on fire. Three thousand of the members of the union went to Newburgh on Saturday and were escorted to Washington's Headquarters and later the fireworks fever seized them and before boarding the boat for the return trip they bought all the fireworks in sight. When the excursionists began to set off the firecrackers on board the boat they were informed of the danger and desisted.

OPERATORS MAKE MISTAKES

They give you a wrong number now and then and occasionally they cut you off unintentionally. But these mistakes are due to human frailty, rather than to carelessness.
The remarkable feature about the Bell telephone girl is that she makes so few mistakes. This may be a surprising statement, but it is a fact.
Every day Bell operators are creating new records for accuracy.
Subscribers can help the operator to give the best kind of telephone service and help themselves, too, by always consulting the directory before making calls, giving their numbers clearly and distinctly and listening for and acknowledging the operator's repetition.

BATTLEFIELD LIKE MAP OF THE MOON

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Forest of the Argonne, June 13.—It was one of those little operations which have been daily taking place for the last twenty months all along the French front. It was a question of straightening out the line, of driving out the Germans from a point of vantage which was annoying the front trenches, and the whole affair took place in ground which had been torn to pieces not only by shells, but also by mine explosions.

It was in one of those ravines so characteristic of the Argonne that we met the colonel in charge of this sector. The colonel was rubbing his hands with glee as he came down the hill towards us. "Welcome, gentlemen!" he said; "you have come in the nick of time. We have just had a nice little success and done just what we wanted without the loss of a man. If you hurry up to the observation post above you will be able to watch our men digging themselves in the enemy's positions, and you will be in time or the enemy's reply."

From the observation post the contrast was an extraordinary one. We had left the woods of great trees, green with spring foliage; we had left the ground where anemones, violets, and all the spring flowers were in bloom. Before our eyes there lay a white, naked hill, where a few sorry trunks and stumps, as bare as broomsticks, took the place of the trees they once had been, and where all green things and all flowers had disappeared, swept away by an avalanche of steel and fire.

This destruction was the work of the French guns. Once the slopes had been as green and shady as the forest through which we had passed. But the trees and underwood gave shelter to the enemy, and so relentlessly they had been destroyed. How many shells that hill had received during months of fighting no man can say. It suffices to know that their holes touch one another across its whole expanse. In the sunlight one looks out on a map of the moon, for the shadow of each shell hole is mysterious and black, throwing into vivid contrast the white ridges that lie between. It was round one of the mine craters that the day's fight had taken place.

As a preliminary to the operation the men had been withdrawn from the advanced trenches at the point where the assault was to be made, for the opposing lines were only nine or ten yards apart, and the best artillery in the world cannot be accurate within so small a limit. The danger of French shells bursting in the French trenches was too great to be risked. The evacuation accomplished, 250 6-inch shells were neatly thrown on the coveted point, of the German lines.

These shells, it was reckoned, would be more than sufficient to demolish all the German shelters and machine guns, and to stupefy any of the enemy's men who might have been lucky enough to escape the bombardment. Meantime the 75's opened fire to left and right of the doomed position, so that no help could come from either side, and the enemy might be discouraged from an attack on the evacuated trenches. The guns did their work beautifully, and when the storm of 6-inch shells had finished the storming party dashed out with bayonet and grenade.

There was scarcely any resistance. The grenade or bayonet accounted for every German left alive, and in a few minutes were working as only men who know that their lives depended on their industry can work to strengthen their position.

Up in the observation post we watched in an agony of expectation the Frenchmen working feverishly at their sandbags. Surely the German artillery was going to open on them and wipe them out before they had time to raise a rampart of defence? But except for the crack of a rifle and an occasional grenade, the silence was broken only by the roar of guns far away. Each moment the bank of sandbags grew higher, and we knew that as the bank rose the trench behind was deepening. At last it became clear that for the moment, at any rate, the enemy had decided to sit down under his defeat, and was in no mood to sting back.

Battlefield Like Map of the Moon.

The French 6-inch gun makes a very considerable amount of noise and its shells, both from their whistling in the air and exploding, should be audible to the deafest ears. Yet in this war noise has become a purely relative term, and a mere detail of several hundred 6-inch shells whistling over one's head and bursting a few hundred yards away may pass unnoticed. When we left the observation post we met a major certainly not more than 800 yards from the advanced lines, and he had not heard a sound of the bombardment which preceded the attack.

"When is our artillery preparation going to begin?" he asked the staff officer who was conducting me round the lines. "I understood that we were going to make an attack on the point D. Has it been put off?"

"Why," replied the officer, "it is all over, and we have captured all we were aiming at without any loss." The afternoon ended, so far as we were concerned, with tea in the colonel's dugout. The colonel was naturally jubilant. Only one man had been actually wounded in the whole affair.

Her Duties.

"You advertised as chauffeurette-maid?" Applicant for Situation—"Yes, madame." "What were your duties at your last place?" "I drove and cleaned the cars single-handed." "And as a maid?" "I took down my lady at night and assembled her in the morning, madame."—Punch.

MAKE SATURDAY A BIG SHOPPING DAY

Delaware County Excursion to Bring 2,000 People to Town Over U. & D. Railroad Chamber of Commerce Leads—Membership Campaign. Advertising Signs and Other Subjects of Civic Importance.

One of the biggest days of the summer season in Kingston is set for June 17, when nearly 2,000 visitors from Delaware county will be brought to the city and Kingston Point by the Ulster and Delaware railroad on its one day special excursion starting from Stamford. Reduced rates prevail and as last year 1,888 persons were carried it is believed that fair weather this year will see an even larger crowd. Considerable interest was manifested in the prospect at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night in the city hall and retailers present were urged to advertise special inducements to out-of-town shoppers on that occasion, thus bringing about a busy Saturday for the retail shopping centers this week.

Another matter taken up was the annual membership campaign, it being decided on motion of Director Bernstein that sustaining memberships be the objective of the membership committees and that all energies be bent toward increasing this class of members. A spirited campaign will be inaugurated this week. The recent activity of the chamber against out-of-town enterprises is said to have made many new friends for the organization among local business firms.

The Press and the Bridge.

President Leighton announced the receipt of the news of the award of the Rondout bridge abutments contract by the state highway department to the low bidder, H. K. Corbin and Company, Inc., whose tender was $61,360. The award was made some time last week but evidently was lost sight of by the department in its bulletins. Mr. Leighton had the information Saturday and in making the announcement he paid a tribute to the work of The Freeman in this connection. Mr. Kingman also praised The Freeman's efforts in this connection. It is believed that work on the abutments will start early this summer.

Want Illuminated Sign.

The matter of an electric sign bearing in illuminated letters, "Welcome to Kingston," was discussed and left with a committee for further action. It was thought that the lighting company would be glad to assist this project.

By Their Fruits.

The directors had expected to hear from Farm Bureau Manager Hook in regard to the tour of the State Fruit Growers' Association terminating in this city after passing through Dutchess and Orange counties. One of the directors could see nothing to the advantage of the city in having the visitors from all over the state look over the progress in horticulture, but another said he believed conventions valuable as an advertising medium. The matter was left for action with Mr. Hook later.

Hurrah For the Fourth!

The mayor's invitation for the chamber to participate in the observance of the Fourth of July was accepted upon motion of Mr. Mahar. It is understood that the program calls for some unusual features, among these for the presence of citizens who have been naturalized within the past few years. By their presence it is planned to show the utter absurdity of all this talk of a hyphenated allegiance.

Chance to See Detroit.

Anybody who desires to do so may attend the World's Salesmanship Congress at Detroit, Mich., July 9-13, without let or hindrance from the Chamber of Commerce. An invitation to send delegates was passed up on motion of Mr. Klock.

Didn't Believe in Signs?

Enameled signs, pointing to Kingston and bearing the name of the chamber, which have reposed in the cellar for some time past, will be furnished up and placed on the highways upon motion of E. F. MacFadden. The good roads committee will take up the matter with the Automobile Club. It is planned to secure permission from owners and otherwise comply with the law in not affixing the signs to trees.

Favor Elmhurst Trip.

The chamber passed a resolution expressing the opinion that the board of fire commissioners might exercise good judgment in paying Fire Chief Chipp's expenses to the Elmhurst convention June 28 and 29, that the chief might urge the holding of the 1917 convention in this city.

Resolutions of Thanks.

Resolutions were authorized extending thanks of the chamber to the New York Telephone Company, the Lodge of Elks, Kingston Lodge of Masons and Company M for courtesies in connection with the transcontinental telephone demonstration.

Favor General Referendum.

In regard to the report of the legislative committee, action upon two of the three conclusions of which was taken at the meeting in May, some question arose as to the expression of sentiment on the referendum dealing with the wage grievances of railroad employees and urging that the Interstate Commerce Commission decide the issue. In the discussion which followed the consensus of sentiment was that too many important questions were sprung upon the chamber upon short notice and the idea was advanced that the referendum be submitted to individual members for their respective opinions. In that way could the exact sentiment of the business men be gained. The matter finally went over without action. Adjournment was taken after routine matters were discussed.

COMPANY M WANTS RECRUITS

Captain Frank L. Meagher of Company M has been notified by the National Guard officers to recruit the company to its war strength of 150 men, and officers will be at the armory every night this week to receive and examine recruits, who will also undergo the physical examination by the company's surgeon.

The recruiting to full strength is desired in order that Company M will be on an equal footing with other National Guard organizations when it goes to state camp on July 8. The officers and men of the company now number 58. The recruiting must be done before June 20.

Camp life this year will be unusually interesting. The state camp will be established on the reservation owned by the state at Beekman, N. Y., which is twenty-five miles from Peekskill. It is planned to have the organization detrain at Peekskill and march to Beekman in a three days' march, which will be an entirely new feature, a new camp being established each night.

The camp will last for two weeks. The first week will be devoted to regimental work, and the second week to maneuvers, and the instruction will be far superior to that enjoyed by National Guard organization in past years.

The opportunity for camp life is eagerly sought by men everywhere. The work is not nearly as hard as it is at the Business Men's Training Camp at Plattsburg, and affords a vacation with just enough work to put a man in first class physical condition. Members receive pay from the time they leave the city until they return.

Garage Owners Combine.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, June 13.—Evidence that automobile garage owners in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and several other large cities in the United States are attempting to form a big combination for the handling of gasoline is in the hands of federal trade commission. This was brought out at the hearing being held today in connection with the commission's investigation into the increase in the price of gasoline. The garage men are determined to make every effort to control the retail price of gasoline within their particular districts, according to the evidence. The move is being justified on the ground that the Standard Oil and the independent oil companies have attempted to drive the garage men out of the trade by establishing their own gasoline stations to sell direct to the motorists. The garage men say they must combine in self-defense.

The Terry Badly Damaged.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, June 13.—Rear Admiral Caperton at Santo Domingo City today reported to the navy department that the destroyer Terry, which ran aground at Puerto Plata, Santo Domingo, was so badly damaged that she will have to be taken in charge by a wrecking crew. One whole side of the vessel was torn open. A wrecking crew from Kingston, Jamaica, has been ordered to proceed to the Terry. Admiral Caperton said the Kentucky landed an additional company of marines at Santo Domingo City yesterday.

Moline Moulders Strike.

Thirty-eight moulders and core-makers at the Moline Plow Company at Poughkeepsie walked out Monday morning in a demand for a slight increase in their wages. ## POSTMASTER DEYO SEEMS PEEVED

Receives Effort of Chamber of Commerce to Have Inadequate Mail Service Improved, According to Letter Received.

That you cannot criticize a public institution and at the same time expect the good will of its chief officer is the novel proposition which staggered Chamber of Commerce directors Monday night when a letter, presumably from S. R. Deyo, postmaster, was read before the meeting. As the letter, published herewith, shows the postmaster is angry because the chamber sought to improve the mail service. In reply to his charge that no complaints were voiced to him, President Leighton and Secretary Canfield both stated that they had called on the postmaster and found him unable to be seen, but that they had left word with the nurse as to their mission so that in stating he had not been consulted, Mr. Deyo was in error.

Some of the directors were of the opinion that the postmaster was not in his normal health and the secretary suggested that the press withhold any mention of the matter whatever. This was resented by some of the directors who made plain the fact publicity never hurt any just cause. Finally, by unanimous vote the letter was given to the press. It is self-explanatory. The letter is as follows:

United States Post Office,
Kingston, N. Y., May 13, 1916.
Chamber of Commerce,
Kingston, N. Y.

Gentlemen: I received your circular letter, also your booklet, but you have not received my check as yet and you are not going to receive it. I think you have a pretty good nerve to ask me to do so after finding as much fault as you have with the service of the P. O. which is as good as it ever was previously. When you find fault with this P. O. you find fault with me. I should judge my check would be distasteful to you.

You never consulted me over this matter one bit but took it up through Congressman Ward before you took it up through anyone. After that you took it up through Mr. Irwin before you even came near me. I hope Congressman Ward will be successful and get it through for you, but I think we will all know more about it before he does. There will be no check forthcoming from me this season and I want you to take my name as a member of the Chamber of Commerce. Neither will there be a check coming from the S. R. Deyo Co. Clean your slate from the bad people that give you bad service. Yours very truly,
S. R. DEYO,
Postmaster.

CONTROL OF CUTWORMS.

How to Protect Gardens And Fields From This Pest.

Cutworms, sometimes called earthworms, and roots are the food of cutworms, whose busy season is the spring and summer time. Some reports of the work of cutworms have been received but there is no indication that they are exceptionally prevalent this year. Commissioner of Agriculture Charles S. Wilson states that the department of agriculture will give information in detail on the cutworm to those who make application for it, and directions as to the best methods of eliminating or controlling it where extraordinary problems arise.

The cutworm is a night worker like others of his species but he is able to do a large amount of damage to growing crops from dusk until sunrise in his short life. Because he works mostly in the night his presence is sometimes not noted until it has been observed that something is eating down the cabbage plant as it is struggling up out of the ground in the garden, or that he is doing the same to some other plant.

The cutworm is cylindrical in shape with a reddish brown head. When full grown in the summer, the worm is about one and one-half inches long and is of a dull brown, gray or blackish color, sometimes tinged greenish and is more or less marked with longitudinal stripes, oblique dots and dashes. The adults are moths with dark forewings and lighter hindwings. Like the cutworms, they feed at night. The females deposit their eggs in the late summer in grass land or where a crop has been allowed to grow up in grass and weeds. The caterpillars hatch from these eggs in August and September, feed on the roots of whatever vegetation is available until frost, when they hibernate in the ground. The next spring they come out of their winter quarters and attack vegetation. If the land is in grass or weeds and is plowed and planted, the cutworms are likely to greatly damage the crop. They eat growing plants even to the ground and hence their name.

Methods of Control.

Plowing in the late fall and plowing and harrowing thoroughly early in the spring, so as to keep the land fallow, starves out the cutworm. Poisoned bran-mash may be used. If it is well applied a few days before plants are set, or a few days after seed is planted, it will often protect crops on infested land. On corn land it may be applied with a seed drill, and in gardens an onion drill is sometimes used. A tablespoonful of it may be applied by hand near each plant or every two or three feet in a row. The mash should be distributed late in the afternoon, so it will be moist when the worms feed at night. Poultry must be kept away from fields so treated. Clover that has been sprayed or dipped in a barrel of water in which one-third of a pound of Paris green has been placed may be used. Where the cutworms climb and attack fruit trees, the bran mash may be distributed around the bases, or a band of tanglefoot will stop them. A collar of cotton batting or wool on trunks of trees or around grapevines makes a cheap barrier against the worms.

The bran-mash is made as follows: One pound of Paris green or London purple to twenty-five pounds of bran or middlings; stir a quart or two of cheap molasses in a gallon of water and moisten the bran. Do not add so much water that the bran will be thin and cake when exposed.

New Telephone Cable Under River.

With the laying of a cable carrying 200 separate pairs of telephone wires across the Hudson river between Beacon and Newburgh started by men of New York Telephone Company on Monday the last link in the longest toll telephone cable in the world is now practically completed. For several weeks the telephone people have been enclosing the toll lines between Newburgh and New York in a cable.

Two Roseton Men Hurt.

When the lever of a jack slipped at the Rees Brick Company's yard at Roseton on Saturday it struck Howard Bell, 23 years old, in the jaw. James Sullivan of Beacon from the brickyard of the Arrow Brick Company near Roseton was also injured about the head the same day, but was unable to tell how he got hurt. Both men were taken to St. Luke's Hospital at Newburgh.

MRS. HAZEL FURMAN & VOTES. © Nat. Film Service.

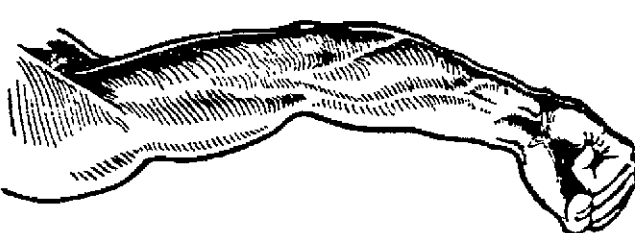

BIRD BALLYHOO LAUGHED AT "ANTI" AND WAS BARRED FROM PARADE.

"Votes," the only bird ballyhoo for suffrage in the world, was banished from suffrage parade headquarters in Chicago, because he laughed at an anti who was just on the point of being converted to the cause.

"Votes" job was to sit on a golden perch near the door and urge all women passing along Michigan avenue to "Come in and sign up for the parade."

His siren call lured a middle-aged anti inside the door and the was just getting interested in an explanation of the bird parade when "Votes" laughed at her. She departed in a huff. "Votes" followed in a few minutes in a yellow taxi, the suffragists fearing that his sense of humor might deprive them of more converts.

The bird's owner is Mrs. Hazel Furman, a devoted Chicago suffragist.

BRYAN WOULD TEMPT THE MOOSE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

St. Louis, Mo., June 13.—"A platform that will tempt the Progressives," was the proposal brought to St. Louis today by William Jennings Bryan when he met the Democratic leaders making ready for the national convention. The former secretary of state said that he had made no plans for a fight either in the resolutions committee or on the floor of the convention to have his ideas on peace, preparedness and prohibition incorporated in the Democratic platform. "I have no plans now for endeavoring to secure the adoption of any specific plank in the Democratic platform," said Col. Bryan, shortly after his arrival. "I am here as a Democrat and a private citizen and as a newspaper reporter. I have no plans which contemplate my taking a seat on the floor of the convention through a delegate's proxy. I believe that the Democratic party should make a real effort to secure the support of the Progressives now left without a real candidate."

Col. Bryan's final statement was taken to indicate that he would exert whatever influence he may have among leaders and delegates to secure the adoption of Progressive planks in the Democratic platform. The former secretary of state, however, was called upon to deliver his former statements, that he believed the Democratic party should make no statement on the subject of prohibition at this time. He denied emphatically a pre-convention report that he had placed in the hands of a friendly delegate from Nebraska Bryan planks on peace and prohibition as the basis for a fight for the adoption of these planks.

Immediately after his arrival Col. Bryan began a series of conferences with various leaders. He asserted that the conferences were largely a part of his newspaper work.

The Nebraska delegate stated a statement, which follows:

"When Mr. Bryan was shown a newspaper quoting a Nebraska delegate as to what he intended to do, he said:

ALBANY SPECIALIST
Makes Marvelous Cures
Will see patients in Kingston
EVERY FRIDAY
AT 340 BROADWAY

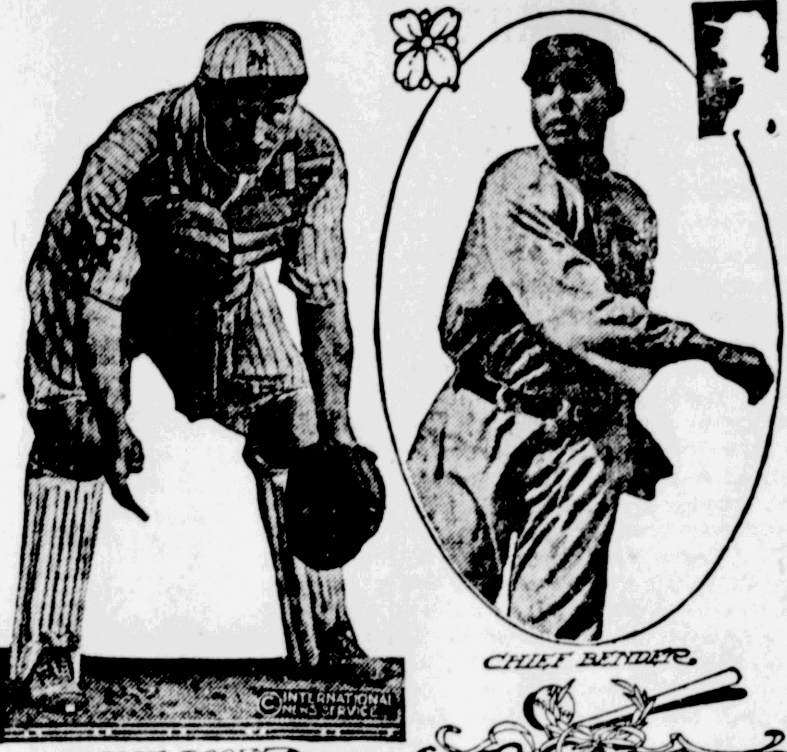

Dr. Swinburne of Albany

Has had such a remarkable success in treatment of difficult cases that many patients have been cured, even after other doctors declared them incurable. If you are suffering from any trouble and your family physician does not cure, it is time to see a specialist without further delay. It is not necessary now, to go to New York to consult a specialist, for you can see Dr. Swinburne in Kingston at 340 Broadway, every Friday, and in most cases the results will be better and save the expense and trouble of going to New York. The treatment given by Dr. Swinburne is most effective and has cured many cases, even after New York specialists had failed.

Now matter how much you are suffering or how severe your trouble may be, you have not half tried to get well unless you have given this noted specialist a trial. It will cost nothing to see the doctor and talk over your trouble, and if you desire to take treatment the charges will be reasonable.

The doctor has permanent offices at 340 Broadway, Kingston, where patients can secure consultation on Fridays from 9 to 12 a. m., and 1 to 4 p. m. Also Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p. m.

DOON FIGURES BENDER WILL "COME BACK"

Two Veteran Major League Players.

Charlie Doon, veteran catcher of the New York Giants, is firmly of the opinion that "Chief" Bender will be a great pitcher this year. Doon is not at all in sympathy with folks who believe that the Indian is through, and doesn't hesitate to say so.

Doon even went so far last winter as to recommend to McGraw that Bender be signed for the Giants, and was given permission to make a deal with the veteran twirler, even though the Gotham pilot had decided that he was through with Indian players. Doon did offer a contract to Bender, but found that the Phillies had beaten him to it.

A few figures relative to Bender's earnings in baseball, compiled from actual contracts the Indian has enjoyed since becoming a big leaguer, will dispel the feeling of sorrow for the redskin over his "bad treatment" from the majors. Bender started out with the Athletics in 1903 and worked for that tribe 12 years. His average salary was $4,500 a season, starting with about $2,000 and ending with $7,000. Thus the chief collected about $54,000 for his contracts in addition to $11,754 for world series extra cash.

Counting the $6,000 he received from the Feds for part of last year, his total runs well up over the $71,000 mark. This gives him an average of a little more than $6,000 a year for 13 years, for a trade that occupied only six months out of the year.

STORIES of the DIAMOND

Joy is the emotion you feel when the home team wins.

Great things are expected of Harry McQuillan, the Bridgeport pitcher.

Somewhere the sun is shining and baseball pennant hopes are at high tide.

Warring nations, like baseball teams, require a plentiful supply of pinch hitters.

Manager Burkett has been successful in landing Lavigne of Lowell for the catching department.

Most boys would prefer to be Ty Cobb first, and president after they have become too old for baseball.

Those Phillies are dangerous at all times. Every man on the team is able to deliver a winning wallop.

Louis Peiper, manager of the Lynn team, announces that he has signed "Bobby" Conley, the Dorchester boy.

If Marty O'Toole continues in his present strait, he ought to eat at least one meal in every league in the country.

McGraw says the squeeze is a sucker play. Right! It makes suckers of the Giants whenever their opponents try it.

Hughey Jennings will have to get some pitching help this season or he will not pull up in the race as he expects to do.

Some folks call the Braves cultured, but Hank Gowdy still contends that coffee is the best drink ever poured in the saucer.

Larry McLean was detected the other day catching for the Columbia university nine. Larry always had a fraternal feeling.

"Jimmy" Sheppard, formerly of the Dodgers, Cubs and Reds, is now managing the Lancaster club in the Pennsylvania State league.

One of the leading reasons for the Giants' great sport is the manner in which Bill McKechnie has succeeded in plugging up the hole at third.

Max Flack is the best bunter on the Cub team. The little fellow seldom fails to lay one down and push his man along, when he is ordered to do so.

Casey Stengel continues to pound the ball to all corners of the lot. The blond outfielder has played a prominent part in the uplift of the Robins this season.

The Cardinals' young pitchers are not living up to expectations. Very much was expected from Hi Jasper and "Sea Lion" Hall, but neither of these has shown anything to date.

COVELESKI HOPE OF DETROIT

Tigers' Chances for Pennant Depend Largely on Consistency of the Veteran Southpaw.

Detroit's chances for a pennant this season depend largely on the form and consistency shown by Harry Coveleski, the veteran left-hander. Coveleski at present is in wonderful form.

When Coveleski is right there is not a better pitcher in the game. He has all the speed, control and knack of crossing the batter that is possessed by the best hurlers in the country today. But he has always been erratic because of his varying physical condition.

Harry Coveleski.

cal condition. Apparently his arm never troubles him, but at times he gets in such bad shape that he cannot stand the pace.

As long as Veach, Cobb and Crawford keep up their safe volleying, Jennings need not fear of losing many close games. But he must have good pitching to win, just as any other club must, and to have this during the present campaign it is essential that Coveleski keep in condition to take his turn in the box.

ONE PITCHED BALL WON GAME
It Resulted in Triple Play and Substitute Pitcher Achieved Most Unique World's Record.

One man in baseball history placed himself in the hall of fame by delivering just one ball—calling for probably only a few seconds' actual participation in the game.

He was Manager Childs of the Portsmouth (N. J.) team.

In a game with Marion June 20, 1910, Childs went into the box and pitched one ball. It resulted in a triple play, and Childs got credit, of course, for pitching an entire inning with one heave, the only time it has ever been accomplished.

Cause for Cussing.
With a Witt already on his team, Connie Mack is now trying to get a collegian named Watt. Detroit has Witt. When all this gets in one box score there will be some cussing by printers and proofreaders. By the way, there is Witter playing with Newark. He might add to the confusion if Connie needs an outfielder.

FARM POULTRY

WINTER ROOTS FOR POULTRY

Fowls Relish Beets and Turnips as Substitutes for Green Food—Better to Feed Raw.

Turnips and beets are good green food substitutes, and fowls relish them. They can be fed by cutting in half and allowing the fowls to pick them to pieces, or they can be ground fine in a bone cutter and fed in troughs. It is better to feed them raw than cooked.

Turnips contain 90.6 per cent water, 0.8 per cent ash, 1.3 per cent protein, 1.2 per cent fiber, 5.9 per cent nitrogen.

Sugar beets contain 26.7 per cent water, 9.2 per cent ash, 1.5 per cent fiber, 9.9 per cent nitrogen free extract, and 0.1 per cent fat.

Turnip seed may be sown either very early in spring and an early summer crop secured, or later in July and August for winter storing. For early use plant in rows one to one and one-half inches deep and twelve to eighteen inches apart in the row.

In field culture the rows are often thirty inches apart to facilitate horse cultivation. The seed is sometimes sown broadcast from July 20 to August 1, when a crop is grown for stock. Two to three pounds of seed are required for an acre.

Beets are usually sown the latter part of April or first part of May. About the same treatment in planting is given the beet as is given the turnip.

PLACE TO FEED THE CHICKS

Difficult Problem on Account of Old Hens Eating Most of Feed—Runs Are in Favor.

It is often hard to feed little chicks on account of the old hens eating most of the feed. To prevent this I make a feeding creep for the special use of the little chicks, writes Owen Crisman of Russell, Kan., in Farmers' Mail and Breeze. To make one of these runs take six pieces of 2 by 2-inch lumber, 2 feet long, and saw one end of each to bevel. Nail two of them with the beveled ends firmly together. Nail the rest up in the same way. When finished they look like three V's upside down. Place the pieces nailed together 2 feet apart and nail lath 4 feet long on these pieces about an inch apart. Put the bottom lath 3 inches from the ground so the chicks can slip under to get the feed. When through using the runs they may be set away for another season. By doing this they will last several years. They save both time and feed in raising chicks.

Creep for Little Chicks.

HATCH CHICKENS IN WINTER
While Outside Weather Conditions Are Unfavorable Youngsters Are Brooded in Poultry House.

Chickens hatched by the mother hen during the winter are brooded in a poultry house or shed while the outside weather conditions are unfavorable.

After the weather becomes settled, they can be reared in brood coops out of doors.

The coops are made so that they can be closed at night to keep out cats, rats or other animals, and enough ventilation is allowed so that the hen and chicks will have plenty of fresh air.

ESSENTIALS IN DUCK RAISING

Select One Breed and Stick to It—Fowls Should Be Fed Frequently—Keep the Coops Dry.

Don't keep two or three different kinds of ducks. Choose one variety and breed for quality.

Don't try, by mixing it with their food, to force ducks to eat more grit than they want.

Don't be afraid of overfeeding. Ducks should be fed four or five times daily.

Don't omit fresh vegetables and green stuff from their diet.

Don't let their coops get damp and filthy.

Don't forget plenty of clean, fresh water, and give them a chance to rest in the shade.

Disease Becomes Epidemic.
A disease that is transmitted through one generation of chickens to another is apt to become epidemic.

Weaklings Most Susceptible.
Roup is infectious and the weaklings are the ones to first become infected.

Hens Pay Biggest Dividend.
A well-cared-for flock of hens will pay a bigger dividend than anything on the farm.

Prevent Waste of Feed.
Prevent waste and make every pound of feed bring the best results possible.

WE ARE ON TRAIL TO YELLOWSTONE

Good Road From Plymouth Rock to Puget Sound is Now Complete—A Picturesque Scenic Highway Across Continent.

The Yellowstone Trail Association today announced its extension from Chicago to the Atlantic Coast at Plymouth, Massachusetts. The route is as follows:

From Chicago to Hammond, Indiana; Hammond to Port Wayne, Indiana, via Valparaiso, Plymouth, Warsaw, Pierceton and Columbia City, Port Wayne to Akron, Ohio, via Lakeside, Fremont, Bowling Green, Napoleon and Norwalk, Akron to Kingston, N. Y., via Warren, Ohio, Franklin and Oil City, Pa., Olean, Hornell, Elmira, Binghamton and Unadilla, N. Y., Kingston to Plymouth, Massachusetts, via Salisbury, Norfolk, Hartford and Putnam, Conn., Providence, Rhode Island, Taunton and Middleboro, Massachusetts.

This alignment of towns was selected by the Yellowstone Trail only after long study of the situation, and a personal view of the roads by agents of the Yellowstone Trail, and the work of marking the new road with the official mark of the Yellowstone Trail, will be begun at once.

The Yellowstone Trail is the one transcontinental highway organization that has a definite and fixed organization. It is incorporated and maintains its own general offices at Aberdeen, South Dakota, with a complete staff devoted to the work of promoting this highway exclusively. It is the only road in the country which maintains an active and effective organization from one coast to the other.

The mark of the trail is a yellow circle with a black arrow pointing toward the Yellowstone National Park. Where turns are marked, an R or L is used instead of the arrow.

In connection with the foregoing announcement from the Yellowstone Trail News Bureau the Chamber of Commerce on Monday night referred the question of co-operation with the project to the Good Roads Committee. It being claimed that Middleboro and Poughkeepsie were seeking the highway. Judging from the above, however, Kingston is already on the map.

FIELD OF SPORTS.

Notes of Baseball, Pugilism and Other Lines of Athletics.

New Orleans, June 13.—Pete Herman outpointed Frankie Brown in 15 rounds here last night.

New York, June 13.—Many fight fans today held that Benny Leonard, shadowed Johnny Dundee in their ten round encounter here last night, while an equal number were positive that Dundee earned the honors. The neutrality division of fight fans decided the contest a draw.

The bout teemed with action. Leonard was the aggressor in the early rounds, but toward the finish Dundee assumed the offensive and appeared the stronger of the two when the final gong clanged.

JOE WRIGHT.

QUAKER COACH DROPS ENTIRE VARSITY CREW.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 13.—Joe Wright, coach of the University of Pennsylvania oarsmen, performed the most drastic action of any varsity coach now in the rowing colony here. With the big race about a week off, Wright, transplanted the entire junior varsity crew, oarsmen, coxswain, shell and all, into the position of first varsity and it is expected that the Junior will now as the varsity in the race on June 16.

The Juniors had defeated the regular varsity with such regularity that Wright came to the conclusion that it would be more representative of Penn's best oarsmanship and would have a better chance of winning than the men of the regular varsity.

MOTORCYCLE AND AUTOMOBILE COLLIDE

Frederick A. Gerhardt, Slightly Injured When His Motorcycle Collided With Ice Cream Truck of James Miller on Broadway.

Frederick A. Gerhardt, chauffeur for George Washburn, narrowly escaped serious injury on Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock when the motorcycle he was riding ran into the large ice cream truck of James Miller, the Broadway confectioner. At the time of the accident Mr. Gerhardt was riding down Broadway while the ice cream truck was turning into the yard at Miller's store on Broadway. The motorcycle hit the truck near the forward wheel and rebounded hurling Gerhardt off. Fortunately he escaped with a severe shaking up and bruises about the body. He was assisted into the Bonanza drug store nearby and his injuries were attended by Dr. Bonanza. He was later taken to his home on East Chester street. The motorcycle was somewhat damaged by the collision.

In Case of Accident.

A crushed finger should be plunged into water as hot as can possibly be borne. The application of hot water causes the nail to expand and soften and the blood pouring out beneath it has more room to flow, thus the pain is lessened. The finger should then be wrapped in a bread-and-water poultice. A jammed finger should never be neglected, as it may lead to mortification.

CUCUMBER MOSAIC DISEASE.

Popularly Termed "White Pickle" and "Nubbins."

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., June 13.—A new disease of cucumbers, known as the mosaic disease, has appeared during the past few years in commercial greenhouses and in fields where cucumbers are grown for pickling purposes. The disease has been known longest and is now most widespread and severe in the middle west, where the industry of growing cucumbers for pickling is centered, particularly in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, and Minnesota. In greenhouses, the disease was reported from Illinois as early as 1908, and is known to occur to a more or less limited extent in New York, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, and other states. Recent investigations of the disease have resulted in the discovery of its nature, that it is closely related to mosaic disease of other plants, and the present indications are that it can be controlled by the introduction of sanitary measures and insect control methods. Further experiments with control measures are being carried out.

Appearance of Diseased plants.

The mosaic disease is commonly known in Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin as "white pickle," in Minnesota it is commonly called "nubbins." The disease is characterized in the field by definite plant, fruit and leaf symptoms. When plants are attacked while very young, they are markedly dwarfed by the action of the disease, growth is slow, the runners are very much shortened, the leaves are correspondingly reduced in size, the plants blossom sparingly, and the amount of fruit is very much reduced. When older plants become diseased the principal visible effects are on the subsequent growth of vines and fruit, the vine tips and leaves being dwarfed and mottled and the fruit malformed as described elsewhere.

The leaves of diseased plants are dwarfed often curled and wrinkled, and usually have a mosaic of light and dark green alternate in some cases the leaves brown and die back from the tip.

The fruits are very conspicuously affected, being dwarfed, more or less mottled or blotched with areas of darker green on a background of light green, greenish yellow, or almost white. In the most decided cases the green areas are raised and appear as definite warts or protuberances, sometimes of considerable size, and the fruits take on many abnormal shapes. In some cases the fruits are almost white, hence, the name "white pickle." This name probably is due to a confusion of this diseased condition with the white or albino plants which typically bear white-colored pickles, and which have been known to occur occasionally in fields for many years. The discoloration and warty condition of the fruits, which often appear on cucumbers not more than an inch or two long, render them unfit for pickling purposes, so that in addition to the great reduction in yield caused by the disease, many, if not all, of the fruits produced by diseased plants are worthless.

In the greenhouse the disease is quite similar in its principal symptoms to those found in the field, the principal differences being that the disease appears to be more virulent, many of the plants wilting and dying.

Nature of the Disease.

The mosaic disease has recently been studied by the Michigan Experiment Station in co-operation with the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and by the University of Rochester in co-operation with the Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station and its nature discovered. It belongs to the same class as the other mosaic diseases of tobacco, potato, tomato, pepper, and other plants, which have been known for some time. The exact cause of this class of trouble has not been discovered, but it is considered to be what is known as a filterable virus, an agent of infection which is so finely divided that it will pass through a porcelain filter and still retain its ability to reproduce the disease when injected into healthy plants. The sap or juice of any portion of a diseased vine if injected into a healthy vine will produce the disease. The period of incubation, that is, the time which elapses from the inoculation of the vine to the first visible symptoms of the disease, in the greenhouse is from 7 to 14 days, while in the field it is usually 14 to 25 days. The agencies of transmission of the disease from diseased to healthy plants are doubtless many. It has been definitely proven that plants here transferred from diseased to healthy plants will carry the disease. It is highly probable that other insects will be found to act as carriers. It is also practically certain that the disease is spread by pickers when harvesting the cucumbers.

Control Measures.

Judging from the nature of the disease and from the preliminary experiments thus far carried out, the remedial measures indicated by our present knowledge are (1) the eradication of insect pests which act as carriers of the disease, and (2) the application of sanitary measures to eliminate the sources of infection. To be most effective, these methods must be carried out by all the farmers of a community.

Rigid insect control measures should be started as soon as the plants are up and continued throughout the season. The fields should be gone over repeatedly throughout the season, especially previous to the beginning of picking, and all mosaic diseased plants pulled and destroyed, as well as plants with which they have come in contact.

Owing to the fact that greenhouse conditions are much more completely under control than field conditions, it would seem an easier task to control the disease there. As previously stated for field control, all diseased plants should be pulled and destroyed as soon as found and the insects should be eradicated to prevent their spreading the disease.

MAYOR WELCOMES STATE COUNCIL

Sons and Daughters of Liberty Open Their State Convention in Pythian Hall with 285 Delegates Present.

With 285 women delegates in attendance the twenty-second annual session of the New York State Council, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, was formally opened this morning at Pythian Hall, Wall and John streets, by State Councillor Rose Dugan and her associate officers. The initial meeting was public and Mayor Palmer Canfield, Jr., was presented to the assembly immediately following the singing of "America." The opening proceedings had been delayed owing to the non-arrival of a pastor from one of the city churches.

The mayor made a brief speech of greeting, saying that the people of Kingston are always glad to welcome fair people to this fair city. The word fair, he said, was intended in a two fold sense referring to the disposition of the order as well as to the appearance of the delegates. The speaker then spoke of the principles of the order as portrayed on a banner stretched across the hall, these being Fidelity, Patriotism and Integrity.

"Any order that is organized in support of such principles," he declared, "runs no risk of breaking, or of crumbling."

Fidelity was defined by the mayor as adherence to duty and what one believed to be right and true. Fidelity was like that of which Macaulay said was "proof through all dangers and through all criticism." Integrity and the moral soundness of its practice inspired was also defined, but upon patriotism the speaker found a congenial theme and an appropriate local setting.

"Patriotism means," said the mayor, "devotion to our country to many but to me that is a limited and restricted meaning. I believe it means being true to God, true to country, true to our homes and true to our friends. No one can knock at the door of Kingston without being impressed upon the patriotic service which its early history commemorates. This city played a most important part in the making of our country. Here the constitution was read for the first time in front of the court house a few hundred feet distant from this point and it was here that the Empire State began its history as constitutional state."

Early Local Patriotism.

Of the enactment of the first laws of the state, the supreme court's first sessions and our own uprising in the matter of tea and taxes were most interestingly pictured by the mayor together with action of the women of Kingston in going to the place where speculators had stored tea and taking what they wanted leaving in place thereof six shillings for each pound, the price fixed by act of the continental congress. The burning of the city for its aid to the patriots' cause and numerous other patriotic incidents in the history of the Colonial city were touched upon together with the prominent place the country occupies in the world today.

"What is more important," said the speaker in conclusion, "is not our financial or material standing in the present but the question has the country increased correspondingly in fidelity, patriotism and integrity. If it has not, then there is a field for organization with the principles such as you espouse."

The mayor then expressed the hope that the gathering would have a pleasant session in Kingston and that its deliberations would prove pleasant and profitable. He was given an enthusiastic applause from the nearly 300 pairs of hands represented.

Chamber Extends Greetings.

Secretary James E. Canfield of the Chamber of Commerce was then escorted before the session and spoke a welcome for that organization, citing some of the points of interest for the delegates from the old buildings such as the Senate House to the new structures as the high school.

In expressing appreciation of the mayor's words, State Councillor Dugan said: "They have been beautiful and I am sure will sink into the hearts of all present. In addition to the principles mentioned this order supports the reading of the Bible in our public schools and reverence for the flag, for the sake of the children for beneath its folds lies the protection of the greatest country on earth, our country."

Willing to Do Their Part.

The state officer also thanked the chamber for its greetings and for the automobile ride around the reservoir, stating that the delegates would not mind walking five or ten blocks for that privilege.

The State Council officers then served as escorts for the mayor and the public session was closed. The delegates today will take up the election of officers and other business of the order, the sessions being secret. Tomorrow the installation of the officers-elect will be held and it is thought that the session may conclude late Wednesday night or by Thursday noon.

State Treasurer Podkin today stated to a reporter that an early news item in reference to this convention which appeared in The Freeman was in error in stating that the Sons and Daughters of Liberty were the women's auxiliary of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. She asserted that the Junior order has no women's auxiliary.

Mr. Dingee's Dinner

Story of a Marriage Anniversary.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The day Silas Dingee married Maud Ball he declared that never before had he known real happiness. He swore that the anniversary of that blessed day which ended his bachelor loneliness would be more to him than all the holidays in the calendar together. A cynical friend at his farewell bachelor dinner the night before had said to him:

"Si, I'm sorry for you. Tomorrow you go to serve your life long term of regulation. Farewell independence. Farewell a jolly night at the club. Farewell cocktails; they'll taint your breath. Farewell cigars; they'll make the curtains smell. Goodbye, Si. The matrimonial prison doors will soon close behind you."

"You dried up old bach," was Dingee's reply, "tomorrow will be the happiest day of my life. And let me tell you whenever the anniversary of my wedding comes round I'll have some delicate memento for the dear girl who is to furnish that happiness. I shall on that day remain at home from business and devote it to celebrating my escape from such crusty old bachelorhood as you represent."

When Mr. and Mrs. Dingee were driven away after the wedding festivities, followed by showers of rice and old shoes, it looked as if his promises would be kept. If ever there was a happy man it was Silas Dingee.

One year passed. Mr. Dingee had been made over by his wife from a bachelor to a married man. He had learned to live for some one besides himself. The first anniversary of his wedding had come round, the day that he had vowed he would celebrate above all others.

As Silas Dingee shrugged on his overcoat that morning preparatory to making a dash for the nearest subway station his pretty wife spoke from the dining room door.

"If I'm not at home when you come, dear."

"Going out this afternoon?" interrupted Dingee peevishly.

"Just to Mrs. Wright's for bridge, honey," she soothed him. "If I'm not here the moment you arrive just get a bite to eat from the refrigerator and read your paper until I come. It won't take me fifteen minutes to get dinner after I arrive—steak and mushrooms. Silas—It's Hilda's afternoon out."

"Seems to be always Hilda's afternoon out and yours, too," grumbled Dingee as he kissed his wife farewell and departed.

As he opened his newspaper on the train he was still thinking of his dislike of being alone. It was one of his peculiarities that he was a restless mortal indeed when Maud was away from the apartment. Maud was an inveterate card player and belonged to two bridge clubs and a band of pinoche enthusiasts. On the evenings when he knew Maud would be late in coming home Mr. Dingee usually went from his office to his club and remained there until his wife's frantic telephone messages assured him that she was home and that dinner was waiting.

On such occasions he usually called a taxi and sped home on the wings of love and rubber tired wheels.

Today everything went wrong. In the mail he found several misdirected letters, which had been returned to him. One of them was an important matter, which involved the loss of considerable money.

So he discharged the careless stenographer, scolded his chief clerk, scolded the office boy into a state of humility and lunched at his club.

After luncheon things went better. He telephoned to Chicago and found that he wouldn't lose the money after all. When the fearful stenographer came for her money he gave her another trial, and the office boy was emboldened to ask for a raise in his pay.

Whether he received it or not is not part of this tale, but at 4:30, when Mr. Dingee closed his desk, he was feeling in high good humor with himself and the world.

He had quite forgotten all about the lonely apartment he must return to and stopped to buy some violets for Maud. While he stood there who should rush up to him with hearty greeting but Tom Finch, Maud's Boston cousin and a particular chum of Silas Dingee's.

"Just going up to your place," remarked Tom.

"Mighty glad to see you!" cried Dingee heartily. "Maud's out this afternoon at some whist but or other, but she'll be home by 6:30. We can have a bite to eat as soon as we get there."

"Good! I'm hungry. Had a little accident coming down. The buffet car and one coach derailed. Nobody hurt. Haven't had a bite since 10 this morning."

"Man alive, hurry!" Dingee hustled Tom into a taxi, and they whirled uptown.

"It's 6 now. Maud will be home in a few minutes," said Dingee as he opened the door with his latchkey. But the rooms were dark until he switched on the lights and revealed the warm coziness of the place.

"We'll have to forage a bit," said Dingee as they left hats and overcoats in the hall and entered the dining room. "I'll make you a cup of coffee, hey?"

"Just the thing. I'm starved, old man."

They entered Hilda's spotless kitchen and investigated the refrigerator.

"Cold chicken! Not bad for a hand-out," commented Tom Finch as he pounced on the platter. "What's that, Silas—makin' of a salad?"

"Yes, and here's the mayonnaise.

Take 'em along. Maud certainly has got some goodies put away for me. Let's try the pantry."

The pantry gave up a remarkably dainty loaf of bread and a huge round cake thickly iced with white.

When the men had set the table in the dining room there was a feast indeed.

"This is a regular birthday party," chuckled Tom as he carved the chicken. "Maud needn't bother about getting any dinner. This is good enough for me!"

"Suits me down to the ground," agreed Silas Dingee. "I suppose Maud will scold when she finds I've treated you to a picked up meal when she likes to put on company frills when you come down."

"Humph!" sniffed Tom Finch, who was more interested in the good things before him than he was in the elaborate preparations for any meal. "Seems to me you live pretty high. Didn't I see a steak and mushrooms and some kind of pudding in the icebox?"

"You did," said Silas cheerfully. "Those are for dinner."

"What is all this food for then?" "Search me!" retorted Silas. "Have a piece of this perfectly splendid birthday cake?"

Tom Finch looked rather startled and laid down knife and fork. "You are sure—sure it isn't anybody's birthday?" he faltered.

Silas meditated. "Not mine or Maud's. It may be Hilda's or the cat's birthday. They don't count, though. What's that?"

"That?" proved to be the buzzer from the dumbwaiter, and Silas Dingee hastened into the kitchen and fussed around a bit. Presently he returned and sat down again.

"Ice cream," he explained. "Maud's evidently going to have it for dessert. Funny, though, she should have ordered such a quantity."

A feeling of apprehension settled over the two men as they consumed the delicious cake, which was rich with fruit.

"If ever I tasted a birthday cake"—Tom was beginning when Silas Dingee interrupted impatiently.

"Hang it all, man, can't you stop croaking? What if we have eaten every hanged thing in the house, eh? It's my house, isn't it? I'll eat the ice cream if I want to!" he ended recklessly.

"Let's say something for Maud," grinned Tom Finch as he pushed back his chair.

As he spoke the door opened hastily, and Maud Dingee, flushed and rather excited from her hurried trip home, came in, followed by a remarkably pretty girl with ermine furs snuggled around her neck.

"Tom Finch!" cried Maud, falling on her cousin's shoulder. And over his shoulder her eyes surveyed the remains of the feast.

Silas Dingee looked at his wife and saw horror in her gaze. She came forward and looked at the remains of the chicken, the evidences of salad, the bare half loaf of bread and finally the damaged cake.

The girl in the doorway looked on with friendly, amused eyes.

"Silas Dingee," shrieked Maud at last, "what have you done?"

"Had a bite to eat, as you told me to!" retorted Silas defiantly.

"But—but—you've—her voice was close to tears now—"you've eaten all the refreshments!"

"Refreshments for what?"

"For my party."

"Your party? When?"

"Tonight, goose!" she sobbed angrily. "Didn't you know that this is our wedding anniversary and it's Polly's birthday, and I was going to have the loveliest surprise for you? The Campbells are coming and the Lanes and the Treats."

Silas Dingee was pale, but he held his ground.

"How was I to know, Maud?" he explained.

"You might have remembered the day," she reproached him.

"I did," he prevaricated. "Didn't I bring you violets?" Triumphant he produced the box of flowers.

Still Maud eyed him suspiciously.

"You often bring those on ordinary occasions," she said, but her husband's chagrined face quite melted her heart so that presently she smiled and said it didn't matter and remembered to introduce Tom to the pretty Polly in the doorway.

Everything turned out beautifully. After all, Dingee frantically telephoned to a caterer and a florist, and Maud and Polly dashed around and straightened up the rooms for the expected company.

They ate a hurried meal in the kitchen, Tom Finch skillfully making sandwiches for the two girls.

It was a most delightful party. Still, Dingee saw there was one tiny cloud which even the sight of Tom's devotion to Polly could not lift from his wife's heart.

Although he did not ask for an explanation, Silas Dingee is quite sure that Maud was more hurt because he had forgotten that it was their wedding anniversary than she was over the stolen dinner.

However, to be on the safe side, he has carefully noted on his desk calendar the important date for next year, and there isn't any likelihood that he will forget it, especially as Tom and Polly have selected the same date for their own wedding.

Flounce upon flounce of soft tulle falling over a dainty flesh-colored satin lining goes far to make this dance gown a charming affair. Elaborate pearl bead festoons, and embroidery afford rich trimming. The bodice is extremely simple, the only relief from the folds of tulle being the wide band of pearl embroidery.

Muir Could Drive a Bargain.

Most people know that the famous naturalist and writer, John Muir, left a substantial fortune behind him when he died, but few perhaps are aware that during the ten years he dedicated altogether to business he was known as the hardest man at a bargain in the whole of California. "As a bargainer," writes Arno Dosch, "John Muir was pure Scotch. Muir had the biggest and most dependable supply of Tokay grapes in California. The San Francisco jobbers bought his yield to meet their regular shipments to the north and east. There were at that time four big fruit jobbing houses in San Francisco, and they tell tales yet in Commission row of the bargains John Muir drove with them. He was never known to name a price first. Whether he was selling grapes or land, he tried first to find out what the other man was willing to pay. But he always had a price in mind, and he got it. It made no difference what was the market price of grapes. He made the jobbers pay what he expected."

Lighting London Streets.

In 1416 citizens were obliged to hang out candles on dark nights to illuminate the streets. This was enforced by an act of parliament in 1661. In 1684 Edward Hemming, the inventor of oil lamps, made a daring offer, which was that for a proper consideration he would engage to place a light before every tenth door on dark nights from 6 p. m. till midnight. His proposition was accepted, and he was given the exclusive right to light the streets as indicated for a term of years. But the scheme provoked a great uproar among the people. Some of them enthusiastically applauded it and hailed Hemming as the greatest benefactor the city ever had. Thousands of other furiously denounced him and his scheme and demanded that the contract be canceled. Hemming held on, and in time the people became reconciled to having the streets lighted. In 1736 the city government assumed the responsibility.

Escapes in War.

Until war ceases, which will be the greatest miracle of all, it will always be the exhibition ground of miracles. How can a bullet puncture a man's coat behind and before or pierce his boot and sock and be gravely shaken out of both without wounding him? And what mysterious channel does this human body contain which leads a bullet dexterously around the heart, a hair's breadth from the seat of life, yet never rending it—a phenomenon vouchsafed by more than one army surgeon? Shells have burst thunderously between the very legs of soldiers and left them still soldiers. Shells of two inches in diameter have passed through legs and arms without shattering the bone or bursting at the impact, although there appears to be literally no room for such a merciful performance. In fact, a history of the escapes in war would be wild reading even after a course of Munchausen.—Exchange.

Well Put.

A man who kept a roadhouse in Rhode Island was called upon to testify in a suit as to the number of cubic yards handled in some rock removing and filling in of lots in the vicinity.

Naturally enough, he showed very little knowledge of the matter, his idea of a cubic yard being so indefinite that it was suspected he hardly comprehended the term. In order to facilitate his understanding the judge said: "Listen, witness! Assuming this inkstand to be three feet across the top this way and three feet that way and three feet in height, what would you call it?"

"Well, your honor," said the witness, without hesitation, "I should say it was some inkstand."—New York Times.

Modern Methods.

"Can you alter that gown to fit me, do you think?"

"Certainly not, mademoiselle. That isn't done any more. You must be altered to fit the gown."—Life.

Peasant Life in Palestine.

The actual peasant life of Palestine has not greatly changed since Bible times, and every village today boasts of its upper room, or guest chamber, where the men meet and chat about the local news. These guest chambers have been in vogue since the days of the patriarchs. Farming, of course, is the principal occupation. The Palestine farmer sows first and plows afterward, as a rule. He scatters the seed over the ground by hand and then plows it in. The plows are very primitive and are driven, as a rule, by oxen. A farmer's field is not marked off by a fence as we understand the term. In the mountainous country lands are inclosed by loose stone walls, still called by the ancient Hebrew name jedar, and on the plains by thorn hedges. When the open fields are owned individually the boundary lines are indicated by deep furrows, in which at intervals stones are laid as landmarks. It is therefore readily seen how easily these boundaries could be changed by an avaricious neighbor, undeterred by the Moslem warning, "Cursed be he that removeth his neighbor's landmarks."

Equal to It.

"I was recently playing in a melodrama," said an actor, "where in the 'last scene the heroine and myself were supposed to be imprisoned in a turret chamber, every door locked and barred on the outside and an infernal machine placed underneath, timed to explode in five minutes."

"We were working up 'the agony.' The audience was breathless with excitement. I made a dash toward one of the doors with the intention of trying to break it down and found it wide open. Here was a predicament. I stood dumfounded. The audience began to titter."

"The heroine unromantically whispered, 'Oh, Charlie, the scene is bottled up!'"

"An inspiration came to me. I seized my sweetheart and dragged her through the open door, shouting, 'Ah, thank heaven, a way of escape!'"

"Then, dashing back with a wail of agony—'No; the outer door is fastened! We are lost! Lost!'"

Troubles of a Great Bank.

The Bank of England has had its troubles, notwithstanding its great financial strength. It has passed through many perils. At various times its notes have been at a heavy discount, its credit has been assailed, it has been threatened with impeachment and it has been attacked by rioters. The first "run" on the bank occurred in 1707. Other panics or runs occurred in 1745, 1797 and 1825. In 1832 the Duke of Wellington was unpopular, and four men placarded the walls of London with the words, "To stop the duke, go for gold." Nobody knew exactly what it meant, but it produced a tremendous run on the bank. At one time the bank lost £320,000, or almost $1,500,000, through the forgeries of one man and still more at another time by the forgeries of another man.

A Dramatic Situation.

Beau Brummel was once sitting at a table with one Bligh, who was known to be insane. The Beau, having lost a considerable stake, affected, in his farcical way, a very tragic air and cried out, "Waiter, bring me a flat candlestick and a pistol!" Upon which Bligh, who was sitting opposite to him, calmly produced two loaded pistols from his coat pocket, which he placed on the table, and said, "Mr. Brummel, if you are really desirous to put a period to your existence I am extremely happy to offer you the means without troubling the waiter." The effect upon those present may be easily imagined at finding themselves in the company of a known madman who had loaded weapons about him.

A ROYAL NURSE.

The Czarina of Russia as Red Cross Worker.

HER DAUGHTERS ALSO SERVE.

Sends a Message of Gratitude to This Country For the Relief Rendered Russian Soldiers by Americans. Saddened by the Long Strain of the War.

Mrs. Marye, wife of the former American ambassador to Petrograd, who recently returned to this country, spoke enthusiastically of the work of the American hospital in Petrograd, of which her husband was president and in which she served as a nurse almost to the day of departure from the Russian capital.

Just prior to leaving his diplomatic post Mr. Marye was decorated with the Order of Alexander Nevsky by the czar.

Mrs. Marye had an audience with the czarina a few days before leaving. The meeting took place in Tsarskoe Selo, one of the royal palaces.

"The czarina seemed very sad and sorrowful over the troubles of the war," commented Mrs. Marye in speaking of the visit. "She is a most beautiful woman, but her features show her inner sorrows."

"The czarina sent a message of gratitude to America for the relief work done for Russians by Americans. A great deal of effective work in aiding wounded soldiers has been accomplished by the hospital in Petrograd that was founded and is maintained by American money."

"It has been visited from time to time by the czarina, who, with two daughters, took a complete course in nursing. She has actually acted as a nurse in military hospitals too."

"There are forty-five beds in the American hospital, and they are always occupied; also the institution has always been taxed to the utmost of its capacity, even though native hospitals have had empty beds in lulls in fighting.

"One of the most picturesque little figures in Russia is the eleven-year-old czarévitch. He hasn't ever been in good health, you know. But he's a game little youngster, and every time the czar goes to the front his little boy is certain Pine Symphony Program.

The music loving people of Kingston seemed to accept the almost inevitable weather conditions attendant upon a symphony orchestra concert, and attended the last season concert of the Symphony Society, given at the high school auditorium last evening in goodly numbers. The program opened with the first two movements, the "Andante; Allegro ma non troppo," and the "Andante con moto," of Schubert's great C Major, No. 7, Symphony. It took nearly the whole of the first movement for the instruments to become solidified in pitch, following the closing of the windows and the exclusion of the damp air, and as the tonal effect became more satisfactory the musicians under Conductor Muller's baton, both literally and figuratively, warmed up to the occasion. There was something inspirational in the very first notes of the evening's performance; the beautiful "chief theme" of the first movement, played as a horn solo by Mr. Deutscher, formerly horn soloist in Seidel's orchestra. The second movement, because of its very character, takes hold of an audience more forcefully on less acquaintance than the first, and the musicians presented the number with considerable grace and effective shading, and good ensemble. Of the two short numbers, "Gavotte and Musette," by Raff and "Twilight" by Csek, the latter was by far the most artistic in its production, as the orchestra gave a really poetic rendition of this work. One of the most difficult numbers on the entire program was the "Allegro con grazia" (second movement) from the "Symphonie pastorale" by Tchaikowski. The orchestra, following the conductor's interpretation and leading, played this work, with its strange rhythm and sense of restlessness remarkably well, giving a fine sense of continued motion. While the audience was warm in its applause of every number, it was especially enthusiastic over this one and the final symphonic work of the evening. At the opening of the concert and just before the closing number, Mrs. Reed, secretary of the Symphony Society, spoke of the future of the organization. All patrons and subscribers were asked to hold their tickets bearing their names until next season, when the value of the festival concert, which could not be given this year, will be made up to them. Mrs. Reed said the society was still hoping that there would arise in the community one who would do for the Kingston Symphony Society what the late Colonel Higginson did for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, put it on a permanent basis. But in the mean time a different plan of operation would be installed another year; a more effective plan, the outgrowth of past experiences. She then called attention to the fact that the public was more and more appreciating the Symphony Orchestra, and that the society was hoping that all of the symphonic numbers on the program had been especially asked for, particularly the closing number, the Allegro Movement from Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, which was beloved alike by orchestra and audience. Calling attention to the devotion to careful study and often self-sacrificing work on the part of both Conductor Muller and the orchestra, and their desire not to keep all the beautiful music to themselves after they had gained it, but their wish to share their treasure with the entire community, Mrs. Reed said that in view of the afternoon audience of boys and girls, who had listened with such earnest interest and pleasure to the music, a long vista of inspiration and helpfulness opened up for such an organization if it could be supported and maintained and gradually perfected through the coming year, that not only for the community, but for the entire middle section of the Hudson valley. But to do this, the financial as well as friendly support of the people would be needed. If it was not given the boys and girls of today would have a right to condemn this generation of Kingstonians for depriving them of a heritage of beauty that would be rightfully theirs because of its possibility. Never has the orchestra so risen to the occasion and their best efficiency and finest interpretation as they did in the "Unfinished" Symphony, and every member of the audience seemed to as well enter into the spirit of the hour. Said one of our best qualified musical critics and musicians in the city: "In that work, the orchestra showed the progress it has made, yes, even since the last concert. It was rarely remarkable. After all, nothing so shows the progress made by the musicians under Mr. Muller's conducting, as well, makes them known and enjoyed by the audience." Still another musician known to be particularly alive to the influence of a program as well as the work of the players, spoke with keen appreciation, not only of the excellence of last night's performance, but of the sense of "refreshment" gained from the concert as a whole, and expressed the hope that there would be more of Kingston who heard it, as to gain their heartiest support for another year. Real support was expressed that the last symphony concert of the season was over with, and the society hopes this regret will blossom into helpfulness for the coming year.

One of the most difficult numbers on the entire program was the "Allegro con grazia" (second movement) from the "Symphonie pastorale" by Tchaikowski. The orchestra, following the conductor's interpretation and leading, played this work, with its strange rhythm and sense of restlessness remarkably well, giving a fine sense of continued motion. While the audience was warm in its applause of every number, it was especially enthusiastic over this one and the final symphonic work of the evening. At the opening of the concert and just before the closing number, Mrs. Reed, secretary of the Symphony Society, spoke of the future of the organization. All patrons and subscribers were asked to hold their tickets bearing their names until next season, when the value of the festival concert, which could not be given this year, will be made up to them. Mrs. Reed said the society was still hoping that there would arise in the community one who would do for the Kingston Symphony Society what the late Colonel Higginson did for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, put it on a permanent basis. But in the mean time a different plan of operation would be installed another year; a more effective plan, the outgrowth of past experiences. She then called attention to the fact that the public was more and more appreciating the Symphony Orchestra, and that the society was hoping that all of the symphonic numbers on the program had been especially asked for, particularly the closing number, the Allegro Movement from Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, which was beloved alike by orchestra and audience. Calling attention to the devotion to careful study and often self-sacrificing work on the part of both Conductor Muller and the orchestra, and their desire not to keep all the beautiful music to themselves after they had gained it, but their wish to share their treasure with the entire community, Mrs. Reed said that in view of the afternoon audience of boys and girls, who had listened with such earnest interest and pleasure to the music, a long vista of inspiration and helpfulness opened up for such an organization if it could be supported and maintained and gradually perfected through the coming year, that not only for the community, but for the entire middle section of the Hudson valley. But to do this, the financial as well as friendly support of the people would be needed. If it was not given the boys and girls of today would have a right to condemn this generation of Kingstonians for depriving them of a heritage of beauty that would be rightfully theirs because of its possibility. Never has the orchestra so risen to the occasion and their best efficiency and finest interpretation as they did in the "Unfinished" Symphony, and every member of the audience seemed to as well enter into the spirit of the hour. Said one of our best qualified musical critics and musicians in the city: "In that work, the orchestra showed the progress it has made, yes, even since the last concert. It was rarely remarkable. After all, nothing so shows the progress made by the musicians under Mr. Muller's conducting, as well, makes them known and enjoyed by the audience." Still another musician known to be particularly alive to the influence of a program as well as the work of the players, spoke with keen appreciation, not only of the excellence of last night's performance, but of the sense of "refreshment" gained from the concert as a whole, and expressed the hope that there would be more of Kingston who heard it, as to gain their heartiest support for another year. Real support was expressed that the last symphony concert

BRINGING PREACHING UP TO THE TIMES

Dr. Ellis, of the Rondout Presbyterian Church considered on Sunday evening the answers of the representative men of Kingston to his question, "What doctrines or truths need especially to be preached by the pulpit?"

These answers fell into three general classes. 1st, those who laid the emphasis upon morality and ethical teaching, calling for short attractive sermons on practical things of every day life, not doctrines or truths, but toleration, love of fellowmen and the elimination of hell and its fires.

Second. Those that laid the emphasis upon the personal Christ and His teachings, both with and without strictures upon doctrine and dogma; "the gospel of a smile and of the Christian's duty to make others happy as himself." Some called for a "Strong Gospel, less theology."

"No doctrines," said another, "but the eternal truth that God is love." Emphasis was also laid upon the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Another would lay emphasis upon "The masculinity of Jesus."

Third. By far the larger part, however, believed in the emphasis upon the great doctrines, such as "The sinfulness of man, the atonement of the Saviour, the Lord's return, justification by faith, the divine sovereignty, God's holiness and justice." "The doctrine of the obligation to give God the first place in our lives," one said. "The doctrine of man's insufficiency; righteousness exalteth a nation; the need of vision; justice; honesty; how easy to fall, how hard to climb, but the view is always worth the struggle; God is; responsibility; accountability; imperishability; God and the world one." This last statement not meant to be monistic but to imply that God is in immediate relationship to the world and its order. One while not holding to a literal acceptance of the Bible, lays emphasis upon the fact that "differences of opinion as to the literal facts of the Bible do not affect the moral truths. That God lives just as truly even though the conception of Him is being constantly changed," he says, "should be made very plain."

After considering these answers in some detail, Dr. Ellis raised the question as to the meaning and import of the term doctrine. While many lay strictures on the teaching of doctrines, when they insist upon no doctrines but the preaching of a strong gospel, they are both affirming and denying doctrines. Anyone who has convictions formulates for himself doctrines and if he attempts to speak his convictions must express his doctrines. What are the great doctrines of the church? They are not simply the teachings of Scripture, but these teachings as tested and experienced by the church in the past. They are the effort of great thinkers to express their convictions and experiences in concise terms.

What are the limitations of doctrine? The danger of holding and teaching doctrines that represent the experience of the past is that they may become forms of thought only. Thus they may become restraints to all spiritual life and progress. They become the fruitful source of bigotry and false spiritual pride, a clog to the church and a stumbling block to honest men who ought to be in the church.

It is my firm conviction that the old great and strong doctrines represent fundamental truths and that each of these doctrines is capable of interpretation into modern language and experience.

In order to be preached effectively the doctrines must be vitalized by human experience. They must be brought down to date. A few years ago perhaps the most talked of man in the Christian world was Henry Drummond and this is just what Drummond did: Being a modern, progressive thinker, somewhat of a scientist and a student of biology, he interpreted Christian doctrine in terms of natural law and evolution.

The great periods of revival and reformation have ever been periods of doctrinal preaching. Did John Calvin, did Martin Luther, did John Knox, did Wesley or Edwards or Whitfield preach doctrine?

Men are moved to action by conviction. Even the Christian Scientists teach doctrine. No, people do not shrink from doctrine, only they want the doctrine to represent honest belief and human experience.

Now has the church a system of doctrine that is needed by the world? Has it a system that it has not only formulated but which it believes? Throughout the world today may be found the church back to every great reform and regeneration influence, in heathen lands establishing hospitals and schools, breaking the caste system of India and emancipating the women of the Mohammedan harem.

Jesus said: "The words that I have spoken unto you are spirit and are life." That is the sayings, the doctrines of Jesus, His experience of God and His message to men are life, and the doctrines of the church represent man's best effort to translate the message of Jesus to men.

COMMON AMERICAN BIRDS

LOGGERHEAD SHRIKE

(Lanius ludovicianus)

Length, about nine inches. A gray, black and white bird, distinguished from the somewhat similarly colored mocking bird by the black stripe on side of head.

Range: Breeds throughout the United States, Mexico, and southern Canada; winters in the southern half of the United States and in Mexico.

Habits and economic status: The loggerhead shrike, or southern butcher bird, is common throughout its range and is sometimes called "French mocking bird" from a superficial resemblance and not from its notes, which are harsh and unmusical. The shrike is naturally an insectivorous bird which has extended its bill of late to include small mammals, birds, and reptiles. Its hooked beak is well adapted to tearing its prey, while to make amends for the lack of talons it has hit upon the plan of forcing its victim, if too large to swallow, into the fork of a bush or tree, where it can tear it asunder. Insects, especially grasshoppers, constitute the larger part of its food, though beetles, moths, caterpillars, ants, wasps, and a few spiders are also taken. While the butcher bird occasionally catches small birds, its principal vertebrate food is small mammals, as field mice, shrews, and moles, and when possible it obtains lizards. It habitually impales its surplus prey on a thorn, sharp twig, or barb of a wire fence.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 13.—Horsemen are rebelling against the niggardly purses being offered on the New York running tracks—and the public, as usual, is the goat.

The prizes offered to bracket horses at both the Jamaica and Belmont tracks have been amazingly small, in view of the "taken" at the gate. Some of the total prizes for each race run only around the $500 mark; others are lower; a rare few are higher. As a result, some horsemen who intended campaigning their animals on the New York courses are shipping them elsewhere. Day after day there are numerous scratches.

The average field at Belmont was somewhere around five horses. Once a two horse race was staged. Three and four horse brushes are frequent. Rarely does the field total eight or ten, as is the case on other tracks where the meet promoters are somewhat liberal.

The numerous withdrawals were at first charged to the fact that many of the steeds were afflicted with a coughing ailment. It is true that such an epidemic did rage at Belmont but that didn't render such a vast number of them hors de race as was reported. From one of the horsemen we get it that none of the owners is anxious to risk his horses in a race where the biggest prize his horse could win is a few hundred dollars.

"The stinginess of the promoters at Belmont is apparent to anyone who will take out a pad and do a little figuring," said the horseman. "The Decoration Day crowd there was about 30,000. The admission was $3 for men and $1.50 for women. Figuring 20,000 men and 10,000 women it means that the total receipts were about $75,000. And on that day the race officials ran off six races with total prizes amounting to a trifle beyond $6,000. The average daily intake for the meet probably will be $20,000. And the average purses are around $4,000. Can you blame the horsemen for kicking?"

Campi Asked Right Party.

Eddie Campi, the prize fighting person, wandered into the Belmont Park paddock and became greatly interested in a certain horse.

"Say, fellah," exclaimed Eddie, enthusiastically slapping upon the back a dignified man who was strolling alongside, "what horse is that? Who owns him?"

The man who had his back slapped, turned around in a startled way and saw the eager face of the prize fighter staring into his. For a brief second the man seemed to hesitate between impulses—one to move away; the other to answer the question. His face softened into a smile and he gave Campi the name and the full history of the horse.

"Say, that bird knows all about horses," said Campi's friend. "That fellow was August Belmont, the foremost figure in the horse racing game in America."

How Herzog Robbed Doyle.

Those who ask—"when is a baseball not a baseball?"—may find the answer here.

The Giants were playing the Reds in New York, with the home crowd at bat. Burns was on second and Doyle was at bat. There were two out at the time. The Red hurler served one up to Doyle and he smashed a bouncer to deep short. Herzog almost ran out of the diamond to snare the ball—but he got it.

Herzog saw in a flash that he had no chance to catch Doyle at first because Larry at that very moment was three jumps away from the bag. Had Herzog made the throw Doyle would have beaten it by three strides at the very least. So Herzog, having noted that Burns got a show start from second flipped the ball to third. Heine Groh grabbed it and touched out Burns sliding in for the third out.

Doyle didn't get a hit on that play. It was scored as a fielder's choice. Yet if the runner had been on the bags Doyle would have beaten the throw easily. It was a clean hit but the slowness of Burns in that particular instance robbed Doyle.

The play also stands out as another instance of Herzog's braininess. Ninety per cent of the other short-fielders in the game would have had their minds so focused on making the play at first, that they wouldn't have taken a third into consideration. But Herzog did and because of that he beat Doyle out of a hit, killed off a man going to third, robbed the side and possibly stopped the Giants from scoring in that particular frame.

Red Monograms Challenge Kingstons

Editor of Freeman.

Dear Sir:—Considerable interest has been aroused over the fact as to whether the All Kingston baseball club or the Red Monograms are the champion ball tossers of this city. There is no way of deciding this fact except by a meeting of the two clubs in a series, as both teams have met and defeated the fastest teams along the Hudson. In view of the above, and being strongly of the opinion that they have the best club, the Red Monograms hereby challenge the All Kingston team to a series of games, same to be played at any time or place convenient to the management of the All Kingston team.

Thanking you in advance for your valuable space, I am respectfully,

P. ZWECKER,

Mt. Red Monograms, Kingston, N. Y.

Hot Liners.

(By Frank G. Menke.)

Philadelphia and Brooklyn were the only teams to uphold the dignity of the east yesterday.

The Giants were the victim of one of those batting matinees they have been inflicting on the other teams.

Those Washington boys are sliding fast. Griffith hasn't all Johnsons for pitchers.

Those Tigers refuse to be downed. The Yankees against were the victims.

The National League champions jumped into second place but the Dodgers refuse to leave the top rung.

Plank pitched for St. Louis and won out. Wonder if he's related to those things the Democrats are struggling with.

The Indians still keep a'going. Nothing but the pennant will satisfy them now.

CONVENTION SIDE LIGHTS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

St. Louis, June 13.—Oklahoma was a "favorite son" in the vice-presidential sweepstakes. He is Senator Owen, and the delegates from the wind-swept state claim he is going to be a real factor.

New Jersey bore down on St. Louis today almost en masse. The "Skeeter" delegation headed by Edward E. Grosscup, is occupying forty one rooms at the Planters Hotel.

The scores of newspaper correspondents who are here today are recovering from one of the greatest shocks of their young and old lives. August A. Busch sent word to press headquarters that all the writers were to be his guests. There was a mad scramble to get work out of the way. The name Busch caused some excitement. There were visions of a trip to a nice, cool, brewery—St. Louis is a hot town—and the scribes were all on hand. Judge the disappointment when it was discovered that the brewery was not on the line of march. The trip was to Mr. Busch's country place. Most of the party perked up considerably, as the supply of mint juleps was inexhaustible.

Every color and shape in Palm Beach suits is seen in and around the hotels of St. Louis. One however, stood out from the rest. It was worn by an alternate from New York, and was bright green, with a red cuff on the trousers. He claimed to be "away ahead of the style." He was—and there does not seem to be any inclination to catch up.

Not all of the visiting correspondents went on the auto trip given to the newspaper men. Some had to stay in town and write side lights.

Governor Major of Missouri, has a silk hat following which is boosting him for the vice-presidential nomination. Its only rival in head-piece attractive is in the Iowa delegation whose members wear straw hats with bright orange bands around them.

Ticket speculators are offering "best seats" at the convention for $25. In Chicago, before the rain spoiled the think, the scalpers placed a price of $200 on single seats to the Republican show.

The rapidity with which the vice-presidential list is growing seems to foreshadow a favorite son hope in every state delegation by Friday. It means more nominating speeches, more dramatic withdrawals, with the result never for a moment in doubt—Marshall.

The interest of the Germans of the country in the convention, and particularly in the platform is seen in the sending of a corps of German reporters to "cover" the proceedings. One of the German newspapermen had a tough time last night. He had written a detailed story of pre-convention happenings and then, when he tried to wire it to his paper in Chicago, could not find a telegrapher who was able to use the German code. The result was that he was compelled to resort to the telephone.

There are almost as many "favorite son" candidates for the supreme court cap and gown cast aside by Justice Charles E. Hughes as there were in the Republican convention last week. Two of today's "nominations" for the place include W. W. Graves, chief justice of the Missouri supreme court and Alexander F. Reichmann, of Chicago.

Miles of red, white and blue bunting garlanded the heart of St. Louis today and hundreds of men were at work putting into place thousands of more yards of the national colors in honor of the visiting Democratic hosts.

SET FIREWORKS OFF ON BOAT

Members of the Christian Endeavor Union of New York city gave the officers and crew of the Day Line steamer Hendrick Hudson a scare on Saturday, when in the course of a frolic they started to discharge fireworks on the boat, and those in charge feared the boat would be set on fire. Three thousand of the members of the union went to Newburgh on Saturday and were escorted to Washington's Headquarters and later the fireworks were seized and before boarding the boat for the return trip they bought all the fireworks in sight. When the excursionists began to set off the fireworks on board the boat they were informed of the danger and desisted.

OPERATORS MAKE MISTAKES

They give you a wrong number now and then and occasionally they cut you off unintentionally. But these mistakes are due to human frailty, rather than to carelessness.

The remarkable feature about the Bell telephone girl is that she makes so few mistakes. This may be a surprising statement, but it is a fact.

Every day Bell operators are creating new records for accuracy.

Subscribers can help the operator to give the best kind of telephone service and help themselves, too, by always consulting the directory before making calls, giving their numbers clearly and distinctly and listening for and acknowledging the operator's repetition.

BATTLEFIELD LIKE MAP OF THE MOON

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Forest of the Argonne, June 13.—It was one of those little operations which have been daily taking place for the last twenty months all along the French front. It was a question of straightening out the line, of driving out the Germans from a point of vantage which was annoying the front trenches, and the whole affair took place in ground which had been torn to pieces not only by shells, but also by mine explosions.

It was in one of those ravines so characteristic of the Argonne that we met the colonel in charge of this sector. The colonel was rubbing his hands with glee as he came down the hill towards us. "Welcome, gentlemen," he said; "you have come in the nick of time. We have just had a nice little success and done just what we wanted without the loss of a man. If you hurry up to the observation post above you will be able to watch our men digging themselves in the enemy's positions, and you will be in time or the enemy's reply."

From the observation post the contrast was an extraordinary one. We had left the woods of great trees, green with spring foliage; we had left the ground where anemones, violets, and all the spring flowers were in bloom. Before our eyes there lay a white, naked hill, where a few sorry stumps and stens, as bare as broomsticks, took the place of the trees they once had been, and where all green things and all flowers had disappeared, swept away by an avalanche of steel and fire.

This destruction was the work of the French guns. Once the slopes had been green and shady as the forest through which we had passed. But the trees and underwood gave shelter to the enemy, and so relentlessly they had been destroyed. How many shells that hill had received during months of fighting no man can say. It suffices to know that their holes touch one another across its whole expanse. In the sunlight one looks out on a map of the moon, for the shadow of each shell hole is mysterious and black, throwing into vivid contrast the white ridges that lie between. It was round one of the mine craters that the day's fight had taken place.

As a preliminary to the operation the men had been withdrawn from the advanced trenches at the point where the assault was to be made, for the opposing lines were only nine or ten yards apart, and the best artillery in the world cannot be accurate within so small a limit. The danger of French shells bursting in the French trenches was too great to be risked. The evacuation accomplished, 250 6-inch shells were neatly thrown on the coveted point, of the German lines.

These shells, it was reckoned, would be more than sufficient to demolish all the German machine guns and machine guns, and to stupefy any of the enemy's men who might have been lucky enough to escape the bombardment. Meantime the 75's opened fire to left and right of the doomed position, so that no help could come from either side, and the enemy might be discouraged from an attack on the evacuated trenches. The guns did their work beautifully, and when the storm of 6-inch shells had finished the storming party dashed out with bayonet and grenade.

There was scarcely any resistance. The grenade or bayonet accounted for every German left alive, and in a few minutes were working as only men who know that their lives depended on their industry can work to strengthen their position.

Up in the observation post we watched in an agony of expectation the Frenchmen working feverishly at their sandbags. Surely the German artillery was going to open on them and wipe them out before they had time to raise a rampart of defence? But except for the crack of a rifle and an occasional grenade, the silence was broken only by the roar of guns far away. Each moment the bank of sandbags grew higher, and we knew that as the bank rose the trench behind was deepening. At last it became clear that for the moment, at any rate, the enemy had decided to sit down under his defeat, and was in no mood to stick back.

Battlefield Like Map of the Moon.

The French 6-inch gun makes a very considerable amount of noise and its shells, both from their whistling in the air and exploding, should be audible to the deafest ears. Yet in this war noise has become a purely relative term, and a mere detail of several hundred 6-inch shells whistling over one's head and bursting a few hundred yards away may pass unnoticed. When we left the observation post we met a major certainly not more than 800 yards from the advanced lines, and he had not heard a sound of the bombardment which preceded the attack.

"When is our artillery preparation going to begin?" he asked the staff officer who was conducting the line. "I understood that we were going to make an attack on the point D. Has it been put off?"

"Why," replied the officer, "it is all over, and we have captured all we were aiming at without any loss." The afternoon ended, so far as we were concerned, with tea in the colonel's dugout. The colonel was naturally jubilant. Only one man had been actually wounded in the whole affair.

Mer Duties. "You advertised as chauffeurette," said applicant for situation. "Yes, madame." "What were your duties at your last place?" "I drove and cleaned the cars single-handed." "And as a maid?" "I took down my lady at night and accompanied her in the morning, madame." — Punch.

MAKE SATURDAY A BIG SHOPPING DAY

Delaware County Excursion to Bring

2,000 People to Town Over T. & D. Railroad Chamber of Commerce. — Membership Campaign. — Advertising Signs and Other Subjects of Civic Importance.

One of the biggest days of the summer season in Kingston is set for June 17, when nearly 2,000 visitors from Delaware county will be brought to the city and Kingston Point by the Elster and Delaware railroad on its one day special excursion starting from Stamford. Reduced rates prevail and so last year 1,488 persons were carried. It is believed that fair weather this year will see an even larger crowd. Considerable interest was manifested in the prospect at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday night in the city hall and retailers present were urged to advertise special inducements to out-of-town shoppers on that occasion, thus bringing about a busy Saturday for the retail shopping centers this week.

Another matter taken up was the annual membership campaign, it being decided on motion of Director Bernstein that sustaining memberships be the objective of the membership committees and that all energies be bent toward increasing this class of members. A spirited campaign will be inaugurated this week. The recent activity of the chamber against out-of-town enterprises is said to have made many new friends for the organization among local business firms.

The Press and the Bridge.

President Leighton announced the receipt of the news of the award of the Roundout bridge abutments contract by the state highway department to the low bidder, H. K. Corbin and Company, Inc., whose tender was $61,380. The award was made some time last week but evidently was lost sight of by the department in its bulletins. Mr. Leighton had the information Saturday and in making the announcement he paid a tribute to the work of The Freeman in this connection. Mr. Kingman also praised The Freeman's efforts in this connection. It is believed that work on the abutments will start early this summer.

Want Illuminated Sign.

The matter of an electric sign bearing illuminated letters, "Welcome to Kingston," was discussed and left with a committee for further action. It was thought that the lighting company would be glad to assist this project.

By Their Fruits.

The directors had expected to hear from Farm Bureau Manager Hook in regard to the tour of the State Fruit Growers' Association terminating in this city after passing through Dutchess and Orange counties. One of the directors could see nothing to the advantage of the city in having the visitors from all over the state look over the progress in horticulture, but another said he believed conventions valuable as an advertising medium. The matter was left for action with Mr. Hook later.

Hurrah For the Fourth!

The mayor's invitation for the chamber to participate in the observance of the Fourth of July was accepted upon motion of Mr. Mahar. It is understood that the program calls for some unusual features, among these for the presence of citizens who have been naturalized within the past few years. By their presence, it is planned to show the utter absurdity of all this talk of a hyphenated allegiance.

Chance to See Detroit.

Anybody who desires to do so may attend the World's Salesmanship Congress at Detroit, Mich., July 9-13, without let or hindrance from the Chamber of Commerce. An invitation to send delegates was passed up on motion of Mr. Klock.

Didn't Believe in Signs?

Enamelled signs, pointing to Kingston and bearing the name of the chamber, which have reposed in the cellar for some time past, will be furnished up and placed on the highways upon motion of E. F. MacFadden. The good roads committee will take up the matter with the Automobile Club. It is planned to secure permission from owners and otherwise comply with the law in not affixing the signs to trees.

Favor Elmira Trip.

The chamber passed a resolution expressing the opinion that the board of fire commissioners might exercise good judgment in paying Fire Chief Chipp's expenses to the Elmira convention June 28 and 29, that the chief might urge the holding of the 1917 convention in this city.

Resolutions of Thanks.

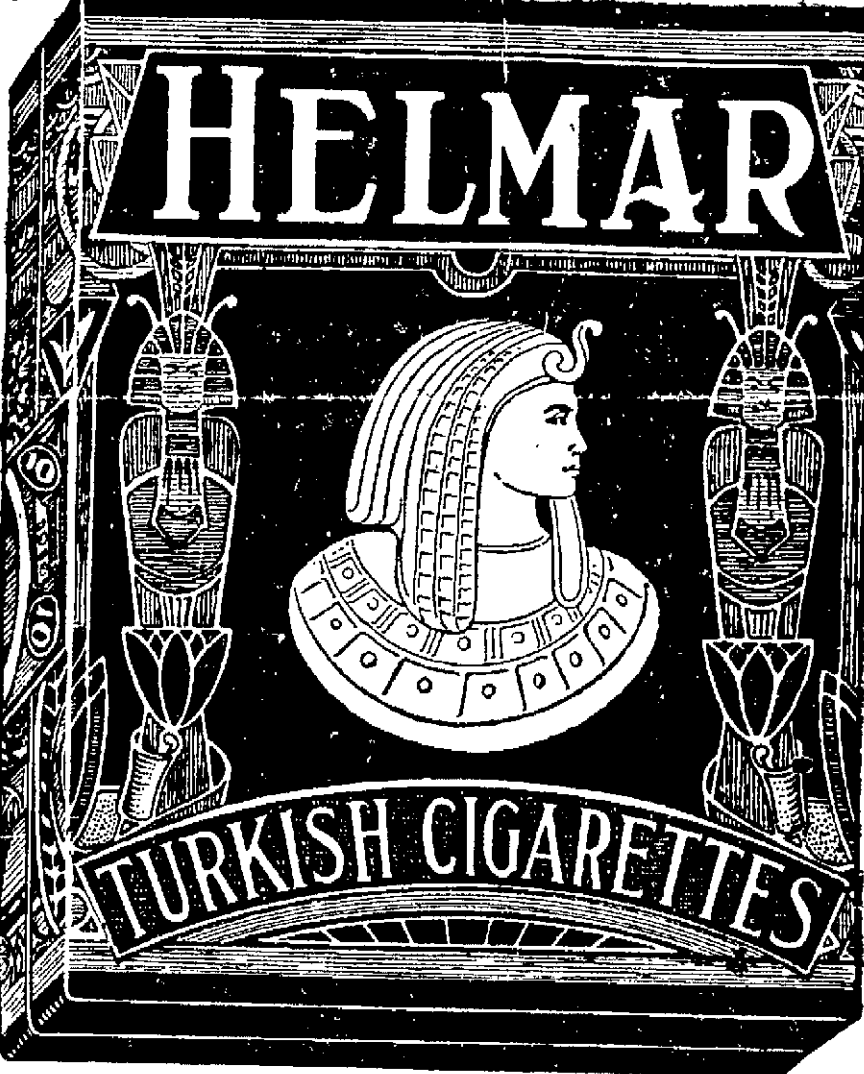

Resolutions were authorized extending thanks of the chamber to the New York Telephone Company, the Lodge of Elks, Kingston Lodge of Masons and Company M for courtesies in connection with the transcontinental telephone demonstration.

Favor General Referendum.

In regard to the report of the legislative committee, action upon two of the three conclusions of which was taken at the meeting in May, some question arose as to the expression of sentiment on the referendum dealing with the wage grievances of railroad employees and urging that the Interstate Commerce Commission decide the issue. In the discussion which followed the consensus of sentiment was that too many important questions were sprung upon the chamber upon short notice and the idea was advanced that the referendum be submitted to individual members for their respective opinions. In that way could the exact sentiment of the business men be gained. The matter finally went over without action. Adjournment was taken after routine matters were discussed.

BRYAN WOULD TEMPT THE MOOSE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

St. Louis, Mo., June 13.—"A platform that will tempt the Progressives," was the proposal brought to St. Louis today by William Jennings Bryan when he met the Democratic leaders making ready for the national convention. The former secretary of state said that he had made no plans for a fight either in the resolutions committee or on the floor of the convention to have his ideas on peace, preparedness and prohibition incorporated in the Democratic platform.

"I have no plans now for endeavoring to secure the adoption of any specific plank in the Democratic platform," said Col. Bryan, shortly after his arrival. "I am here as a Democrat and a private citizen and as a newspaper reporter. I have no plans which contemplate my taking a seat on the floor of the convention through a delegate's proxy. I believe that the Democratic party should make a real effort to secure the support of the Progressives now left without a real candidate."

Col. Bryan's final statement was taken to indicate that he would exert whatever influence he may have among leaders and delegates to secure the adoption of Progressive planks in the Democratic platform. The former secretary of state, however, was called upon to reiterate his former statements. That he believed the Democratic party should make no statement on the subject of prohibition at this time. He denied emphatically a statement that he had planned to take a seat on the floor of the convention to have his ideas on peace and prohibition incorporated in the platform.

Immediately after his arrival Col. Bryan began a series of conferences with various leaders. He stated that the conferences were largely a part of his newspaper work.

The Nebraska delegate stated a statement which follows:

"When Mr. Bryan was shown a newspaper quoting a Nebraska delegate as to what he intended to do, he said: "The brewery delegates from Nebraska do not speak for me, and nothing they say concerning me ought to have the least weight with the delegates of this convention. I was defeated by the liquor interests of Nebraska because I favored prohibition in the state, in spite of the fact that I announced on many occasions, and published in my paper that I did not think it wise for the Democratic national convention to put a prohibition plank in the platform."

"I am not a delegate simply because I would not join with the brewers, distillers and saloon-keepers of Nebraska. I much prefer being here as a private citizen than as the representative of the most conscienceless group of sordid men that have ever tried to corrupt American politics. I am proud to be against them and proud to have their opposition."

"Half the delegates are political friends of mine. A number of them are not prohibitionists but they refused to take orders from the liquor interests, and are here as representatives of Nebraska. They will be able to hold their own as against those delegates who put the liquor question above every other issue."

"My attitude on prohibition is still the same, and those delegates from Nebraska who take advantage of the plank do it to give themselves prominence they could not secure in any other way. The hollowness of their pretence that they are in harmony with President Wilson is shown by the fact that 9,000 of their supporters voted for an unknown brewer against President Wilson in a presidential primary in Nebraska."

Mrs. Bryan came in on another train and joined Col. Bryan at his hotel. The two were met later by Charles A. Bryan, a brother, and editor of Bryan's weekly paper.

DOOIN FIGURES BENDER WILL "COME BACK"

Two Veteran Major League Players.

Charlie Dooin, veteran catcher of the New York Giants, is firmly of the opinion that "Chief" Bender will be a great pitcher this year. Dooin is not at all in sympathy with folks who believe that the Indian is through, and doesn't hesitate to say so.

Dooin even went so far last winter as to recommend to McGraw that Bender be signed for the Giants, and was given permission to make a deal with the veteran twirler, even though the Gotham pilot had decided that he was through with Indian players. Dooin did offer a contract to Bender, but found that the Phillies had beaten him to it.

A few figures relative to Bender's earnings in baseball, compiled from actual contracts the Indian has enjoyed since becoming a big leaguer, will dispel the feeling of sorrow for the redskin over his "bad treatment" from the majors.

Bender started out with the Athletics in 1903 and worked for that tribe 12 years. His average salary was $4,500 a season, starting with about $2,000 and ending with $7,000. Thus the chief collected about $54,000 for his contracts in addition to $11,754 for world series extra cash.

Counting the $6,000 he received from the Feds for part of last year, his total runs well up over the $71,000 mark. This gives him an average of a little more than $6,000 a year for 13 years, for a trade that occupied only six months out of the year.

COVELESKI HOPE OF DETROIT

Tigers' Chances for Pennant Depend Largely on Consistency of the Veteran Southpaw.

Detroit's chances for a pennant this season depend largely on the form and consistency shown by Harry Coveleski, the veteran left-hander. Coveleski at present is in wonderful form.

When Coveleski is right there is not a better pitcher in the game. He has all the speed, control and knack of crossing the batter that is possessed by the best hurlers in the country today. But he has always been erratic because of his varying physical condition.

When through using the runs they may be set away for another season. By doing this they will last several years. They save both time and feed in raising chicks.

HATCH CHICKENS IN WINTER

While Outside Weather Conditions Are Unfavorable Youngsters Are Brooded in Poultry House.

Chickens hatched by the mother hen during the winter are brooded in a poultry house or shed while the outside weather conditions are unfavorable.

After the weather becomes settled, they can be reared in brood coops out of doors.

The coops are made so that they can be closed at night to keep out cats, rats or other animals, and enough ventilation is allowed so that the hen and chicks will have plenty of fresh air.

ESSENTIALS IN DUCK RAISING

Select One Breed and Stick to It—Fowls Should Be Fed Frequently—Keep the Coops Dry.

Don't keep two or three different kinds of ducks. Choose one variety and breed for quality.

Don't try, by mixing it with their food, to force ducks to eat more grit than they want.

Don't be afraid of overfeeding. Ducks should be fed four or five times daily.

Don't omit fresh vegetables and green stuff from their diet.

Don't let their coops get damp and filthy.

Don't forget plenty of clean, fresh water, and give them a chance to rest in the shade.

A disease that is transmitted through one generation of chickens to another is apt to become epidemic.

ONE PITCHED BALL WON GAME

It Resulted in Triple Play and Substitute Pitcher Achieved Most Unique World's Record.

One man in baseball history placed himself in the hall of fame by delivering just one ball—calling for probably only a few seconds' actual participation in the game.

He was Manager Childs of the Portsmouth (O.) team.

In a game with Marion June 20, 1910, Childs went into the box and pitched one ball. It resulted in a triple play, and Childs got credit, of course, for pitching an entire inning with one heave, the only time it has ever been accomplished.

Cause for Cussing.

With a Witt already on his team, Connie Mack is now trying to get a collegian named Watt. Detroit has Witt. When all this gets in one box score there will be some cussing by printers and proofreaders. By the way, there is Witt playing with Newark. He might add to the confusion if Connie needs an outfielder.

FARM POULTRY

WINTER ROOTS FOR POULTRY

Fowls Relish Beets and Turnips as Substitutes for Green Food—Better to Feed Raw.

Turnips and beets are good green food substitutes, and fowls relish them. They can be fed by cutting in half and allowing the fowls to pick them to pieces, or they can be ground fine in a bone cutter and fed in troughs. It is better to feed them raw than cooked.

Turnips contain 90.6 per cent water, 0.8 per cent ash, 1.3 per cent protein, 1.2 per cent fiber, 5.9 per cent nitrogen.

Sugar beets contain 26.7 per cent water, 9.2 per cent ash, 1.5 per cent fiber, 9.9 per cent nitrogen free extract, and 0.1 per cent fat.

Turnip seed may be sown either very early in spring and an early summer crop secured, or later in July and August for winter storing. For early use plant in rows one to one and one-half inches deep and twelve to eighteen inches apart in the row.

In field culture the rows are often thirty inches apart to facilitate horse cultivation. The seed is sometimes sown broadcast from July 20 to August 1, when a crop is grown for stock. Two to three pounds of seed are required for an acre.

Beets are usually sown the latter part of April or first part of May. About the same treatment in planting is given the beet as is given the turnip.

PLACE TO FEED THE CHICKS

Difficult Problem on Account of Old Hens Eating Most of Feed—Runs Are in Favor.

It is often hard to feed little chicks on account of the old hens eating most of the feed. To prevent this I make a feeding creep for the special use of the little chicks, writes Owen Crisman of Russell, Kan., in Farmers' Mail and Breeze. To make one of these runs take six pieces of 2 by 2-inch lumber, 2 feet long, and saw one end of each to bevel. Nail two of them with the beveled ends firmly together. Nail the rest up in the same way. When finished they look like three V's upside down. Place the pieces nailed to-

WILSON FEARS A QUIET MAN

President Tells Cadets: Never Know Him—Advocates Preparedness and Spiritual Partnership
With Both Continents of Western Hemisphere.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

West Point, June 13.—Condemning militarism and speaking of the prospects of peace, preparedness and spiritual partnership, President Wilson today addressed the cadets at the military academy graduation exercises.

He took a slap at Col. Roosevelt when he said: "Never since I was a youngster have I been afraid of a soldier; I have always feared a quiet man."

Touching on the European war, he said it was not by accident that the war came, and it will not be by accident that the end will come.

The president referred again to his views on the proposed league of nations. He said:

"We are ready to become partners with the other nations of the world in seeing that justice is given to all nations. We are spiritual partners with both continents of this hemisphere. We stand ready with our power to protect the liberty and integrity of the nations of this hemisphere."

As to Americanism and so-called "Americanism," the president said:

"No man who does not put America first can consort with us." The president in referring to the cadets as "youngsters" admonished them that they should be "citizens before officers," pointing out that they faced "extraordinary possibilities."

In condemning militarism he said: "No one loves a nation with a chip on its shoulder."

The cadets applauded vigorously when the president said after he had talked about preparedness:

"The kind is going to know that when America speaks she means what she says."

"It is our imperative duty to be prepared," the president said. "We ought to know what we are preparing for, as it would be hazardous if we did not know it." He said a fear of militarism caused some people to oppose preparedness.

"I look upon this body of men who are graduating today with a peculiar interest," the president said. "I feel like telling them that they are living in a day not only so interesting because it is fraught with change, but also because so responsible. Days of responsibility are the only days that count in time, because they are the only days that are the test of quality. They are the days when manhood and purpose are tried out as by fire. I need not tell you young gentlemen that you are not like an ordinary graduating class of one of our universities. The men in those classes look forward to the life which they are to lead after graduation with a great many questions in their mind. Most of them don't know exactly what their lives are going to develop into. Some of them don't know what preparation they are going to follow. All of them are concerned with what will be the line of duty and advancement and the ultimate goal of success for them. There is no conjecture for you. You have enlisted in something that does not stop when you leave the academy. You are only beginning to realize it, which then only begins to be filled with the full richness of its meaning, and you can look forward with absolute certainty to the sort of thing that you will be obliged to do."

"This has always been true of graduating classes at West Point, but the certainty that some of the older classes used to look forward to was a very dull certainty. Some of the old days in the army, I fancy, were not very interesting days. Sometimes men like the present chief of staff, for example, could all their lives with the interest of really knowing and understanding the Indians of the western plains, knowing what was going on inside of their minds and being able to be an intermediary between and those who dealt with them by speaking their own language, could enrich their lives, but the ordinary life of the average officer at a western post cannot have been very exciting, and I think with admiration of those old years through which officers who had not a great deal to do, listened, nevertheless, upon being efficient and worth while, and keeping their men fit at any rate for the duty to which they were assigned."

"But in your case there are many extraordinary possibilities, because, gentlemen, no man can certainly tell you what the immediate future is going to be either in the history of this country or in the history of the world."

It is not by accident that the present great war came in Europe. Every element was there, and the contest had to come sooner or later and it is not going to be by accident that the results are worked out, but by purpose—by the purpose of the men who are strong enough to have guiding minds and indomitable wills when the time for decision and settlement comes."

"And the part that the United States is to play has this distinction in it—that it is to be in any event a distinguished part."

"There is nothing that the United States wants that it has to get by war, but there are a great many things that the United States has to do. It has to see that its life is not interfered with by anybody else who wants something."

"These are days when we are making preparation, when the things most commonly discussed around every sort of table, in every sort of circle, in the shops and in the streets, is preparedness and undoubtedly gentlemen that is the present imperative duty of America, to be prepared. But we ought to know what we are preparing for. I remember hearing a wise man say that the old maxim that 'Every-thing comes to him that waits' is all very well provided he knows what he is waiting for; and preparedness might be a very hazardous thing if we did not know what we wanted."

to do with the force that we mean to accumulate and to get into fighting shape.

"America, fortunately, does know what she wants to do with her force."

"America came into existence for a particular reason. When you look about upon the beautiful hills, and up this stately stream, and then let your imagination run over the whole body of this great country, from which you youngsters are drawn, far and wide, you remember that while it had aboriginal inhabitants, while there were people living here, there was no civilization which we displaced. It was as if in the providence of God, a continent had been kept unused and waiting for a peaceful people who loved liberty and the rights of men more than they loved anything else, to come and set up an unselfish commonwealth. It is a very extraordinary thing."

"You are so familiar with American history, at any rate in its general character. I don't accuse you of knowing the details of it, for I never found the youngster who did, but you are so familiar with the general character of American history that it does not seem strange to you, but it is a very strange history. There is none other like it in the world, of an unused continent, and building up a policy exactly to suit themselves, not under the domination of any ruling dynasty or of the ambitions of any royal family, doing what they pleased with their own life, on a free space of land which God has made rich with every resource which was necessary for the civilization they meant to build up. There is nothing like it."

"Now what we are preparing to do is to see that nobody mars that, and that, being safe itself from interference from the outside all of its force is going to be behind its moral idea, and mankind is going to know that when America speaks she means what she says. I heard a man say to another, 'If you wish me to consider you witty, I must really trouble you to make a joke.'"

"We have a right to say to the rest of mankind: 'If you don't wish to interfere with us, if you are disinterested, we must really trouble you to give evidence of that fact.' We are not in for anything selfish, and we want the whole might power of America thrown into that scale, and not into any other."

"That is holding the chief thing that is holding many people back from enthusiasm for what is called preparedness is the moral of militarism. I want to say to you, young gentlemen, about militarism. You are not a militarist because you are military. Militarism does not consist in the existence of an army, not even in the existence of a very great army. Militarism is a spirit. It is a point of view. It is a system. It is a purpose. The purpose of militarism is to use armies for aggression. The spirit of militarism is the opposite of the civilian spirit—the citizen spirit. In a country where militarism prevails, the military man looks down upon the civilian, regards him as inferior, thinks of him as intended for his, the military man's, support and use, and just so long as America is America, that spirit and point of view is impossible for us. There is as yet in this country so far as I can detect, no talent of the spirit of militarism."

"You young gentlemen are not preferred in promotion because of the military spirit. You are not drawn into the academy because you belong to certain influential circles. You do not come here with a long tradition of military pride back of you. You are picked out from the citizens of the United States to be that part of the force of the United States which makes its policy safe against interference. You are part of American citizens who say to those who would interfere 'You must not.' But you are American citizens, and the idea I want to leave with you boys is this: No matter what comes, always remember that first of all you are citizens of the United States. Before you are officers, and that you are officers because you represent in your peculiar profession what the citizenship of the United States stands for. There is no danger of militarism if you are genuine Americans, and I for one do not doubt that you are. When you begin to have the militaristic spirit—not the military spirit, that is all right—then begin to doubt whether you are Americans or not."

"You know that one thing in which our forefathers took pride was this, that the civil power is superior to the military power in the United States."

"Once and again the people of the United States have so admired some great military man as to make him president of the United States, when he became commander in chief, but the forces of the United States, but he was commander in chief because he was president, not because he had been trained to arms, and his authority was civil, not military."

"I can teach you nothing of military power, but I am instructed by the constitution to use you for constitutional and patriotic purposes. And that is the only use you care to be put to. That is the only use you ought to care to be put to because, after all, what is the use in being an American if you do not know what it is?"

"You have read a great deal in the books about the pride of the old Roman citizen, who always felt like drawing himself to his full height when he said, 'I am a Roman,' but as compared with the pride that must have risen to his heart, our pride has a new distinction, not the distinction of the mere imperial power of a great empire, not the distinction of being masters of the world, but of the distinction of carrying certain lights for the world that the world has never so distinctly seen before, certain guiding lights of liberty and principle and justice."

"We have drawn our people as you know, from all parts of the world, and we have been somewhat disturbed recently, gentlemen, because some of these, though I believe a very small number, whom we have drawn into our citizenship, have not taken into their hearts the spirit of America and have loved other countries more than they loved the country of their adoption; and we have talked a great deal about Americanism. It ought to be a matter of pride with us to know that Americanism really consists in, Americanism consists in utterly believing in the principles of Americanism."

and putting them first as above anything that might by chance come into competition with them. And I for my part believe that the American test is a spiritual test. If a man has to make excuses for what he has done as an American, I doubt his Americanism. He ought to know at every step of his action that the motive that lies behind what he does is a motive which no American need be ashamed of for a moment. Now, we ought to put this test to every man we know. We ought to let it be known that nobody who does not put America first can consort with us."

"But we ought to set them the example by thinking American thoughts, by entertaining American purposes, and these thoughts and purposes will stand the test of example anywhere in the world, for they are intended for the betterment of mankind."

"So I have come to say these few words to you today, gentlemen, for a double purpose: first of all to express my personal good wishes to you in your graduation, and my personal interest in you, and second to remind you how we must all stand together in one spirit as lovers and servants of America. And that means something more than lovers merely of the United States. You have heard of the Monroe Doctrine, gentlemen. You know that we are already spiritual partners with both continents of this hemisphere and that America means something which is bigger even than the United States and that we stand here with the glorious power of this country ready to swing it out into the field of action whenever liberty and independence and political integrity are threatened anywhere in the western hemisphere. And we are ready—nobody has authorized me to say this, but I am sure of it—we are ready to join with the other nations of the world in seeing that the kind of justice prevails everywhere that we believe in."

"So that you are graduating today, gentlemen, into a class of distinction. Glory attaches to all those men whose names we love to recount, who have made the annals of the American army distinguished. They played the part they were called on to play with honor and with extraordinary character and success."

"I am congratulating you, not because you will be better than they, but because you will have a wider world of thought and conception to play you part."

"I am an American, but I don't believe that any of us loves a blustering nationality, a nationality with a chip on its shoulder, a nationality which we love to quiet, self respecting, unquerable spirit which does not strike until it is necessary to strike, and then strikes to conquer. Never since I was a youngster have I been afraid of the noisy man. I have always been afraid of the still man. I had a classmate at college who was most dangerous when he was most affable. When he was maddest he seemed to have the sweetest temper in the world. He would approach you with a most ingratiating smile, and then you knew that every red corpuscle in his blood was up and shouting. If you work things off in your mind; you don't work them off in your four purposes. So my conception of America is a conception of infinite dignity along with quiet, unquestionable power."

"I ask you gentlemen to join with me in that conception, and let us all in our several spheres be soldiers together to realize it."

BRIDGE ABUTMENTS CONTRACT AWARDED

State Highway Department Awards
Contract For Sleightsburgh Bridge
Abutments—Work to be Started
Shortly—Will Take About Year to Build.

In keeping with its promise the state highway department has awarded the contract for building the concrete abutments for the proposed Sleightsburgh bridge to H. K. Corbin Company, Inc., of New York city, whose bid was $61,360. It is expected that the actual work of construction will be started in the near future.

Not until the work of building the abutments is actually started will the residents of Ulster county believe that the long expected and long promised bridge is under course of construction. The abutments are to be of concrete and as they are a massive piece of work it will take in the neighborhood of a year before they are completed. By the time the abutments are finished it is expected that the steel market will be back to normal again and that the remainder of the contract will be submitted to contractors for bids.

Ulster county has already expended considerable money in obtaining the right of way necessary, and has purchased two houses on Abel street which have been torn down and removed to make way for the bridge.

It will be remembered that the state highway department asked for bids on the construction of the entire bridge, and when they were opened it was found that the lowest bid exceeded the appropriation for the proposed construction. This was due to the sudden rise in the steel market caused by the European war. As a result all of the bids were rejected, and it looked for a time as though no bridge would be built.

Ulster county men interested in the bridge took the matter up with the state highway department and called its attention to the many promises made the county regarding the bridge and suggested that if the steel market was high at this time it would not be a bad idea to ask for contracts on the concrete work. This the highway department promised to do, and did.

The awarding of the contract for the building of the concrete abutments makes the bridge just one step nearer.

Three Lies That Are Condoned.

POULTRY and EGGS

LEG WEAKNESS REMEDY.
Cause and Treatment of This Condition of the Chickens.

As a rule, leg weakness never gets very bad until the chicks are two or three months old, says the Kansas Farmer. There are several causes that contribute to this ailment, and the most prevalent one is that the chicks are kept too long on hard board floors before being let out on the ground. The larger birds are more prone to this trouble than the smaller and more active breeds, and cockerels are afflicted with it more than pullets possibly because their legs are longer and cannot support their bodies. This weakness is often caused by pushing the growth, by feeding too much fattening food and condiments, thereby increasing the weight of the body beyond the ability of the legs to support it.

If the birds are getting into this condition the poultryman will notice at first an unsteadiness in gait. They move slowly, and the limbs shake slightly. In a week's time they can hardly keep up on their legs and when feeding will sit down so that the body is resting on the ground. The bird otherwise appears to be healthy. The feathers are bright, the eye clear and the appetite good. As the days pass the bird loses its desire for food, it picks upon its brothers, like a multiple upon him, he becomes thin and the skin seems dry and crackly.

In the very beginning of the trouble remove all causes of the weakness. Spice, corn, cornmeal, buckwheat and any amount of feed for weeks to such birds. Instead of such fattening food which goes to make flesh, they should be fed bone and feather making rations. Feed clean meat and bone meal in goodly proportions. Ground fresh bone and meat gristle are all good for them. Have regular times to give the meals and make each bird work for part of his food. If possible have sick birds by themselves to avoid imposition by the other birds. A grass run, with shade and cool water, will help cure these cases. If you have time and patience one-tenth grain of quinine given to each bird with leg weakness every morning will help bring back health. But the most desirable thing to do is to let them have all the range they want so as to develop their muscles. If you keep them on a hard board floor, no matter what you give them, they will never get strong.

Good Liver and Good Laying.

According to the experience of Mr. N. L. Harris of the Kansas State college, it is advisable to feed all grains in a deep litter. Oat straw or alfalfa is good for this purpose. Hens should be fed liberally, but should not be fed until they are willing to work for their food.

There is an old time fallacy that a hen can become too fat to lay. Experiments have been carried out to determine the laying ability of fat and lean hens and in every instance the fat hens have outlaid the lean ones. The egg begins its formation with the yolk, which is practically all fat, and so it is absolutely essential that a hen have excess fat before eggs are formed. A hen does not cease laying from an overabundance of fat, in the opinion of Mr. Harris, but because her legs and liver are not working to their full capacity.

Watch Out For Vermin.

After the chicks begin to feather out there is not so much danger of their not thriving, but they must still be looked after to see that enemies are not getting away with them. There is always danger from the depredations of rats, skunks, hawks, cats and dogs, and they should be guarded from these enemies as much as possible. It is a good plan to count the chicks at night to see that the usual number are on hand. If some are missing the cause should be sought and remedied. It is very disheartening after raising a brood of chicks to have them dwindle away, one by one, till they are all gone. If they are counted occasionally you will know whether any enemy is getting away with them or not.

Looking Ahead.

"What's the trouble, girl?" "Oh, Aigernon, I'm afraid for you. Father threatens to kick you into the middle of next week." "Well, my dear, if he insists, let him do it. But hold next Wednesday evening open for me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

While a Wyandotte hen may be a good layer, a matter of what type she may be to be a table fowl of unsurpassed merit she must be near the standard type. This will give a bird that when dressed shows a remarkable amount of breast, with a very attractive yellow skin. The bird here shown is a Silver Penciled Wyandotte hen.

Lord Byron Had a Positive Dread of Fridays and Sundays.

The belief in palmists and sooth-sayers is not, as is sometimes supposed, confined to the ignorant and the credulous. Lord Byron was not a skeptic in these matters. Just before his death, as recorded in "Byron—The Last Phase," by Richard Edgcumbe, "he said he had reflected a great deal on a prediction which had been made to him when a boy by a famed fortune teller in Scotland."

"His mother, who firmly believed in chronomancy and astrology, had sent for this person and desired him to inform him what would be the future destiny of her son. Having examined attentively the palm of his hand, the man looked at him for awhile steadfastly and then with a solemn voice exclaimed, 'Beware of your thirty-seventh year, my young lord, beware!'

"He had entered on his thirty-seventh year on Jan. 22, and it was evident from the emotion with which he related this circumstance that the caution of the palmist had produced a deep impression on his mind, which in many respects was so superstitious that we thought it proper to accuse him of superstition."

"To say the truth," answered his lordship, "I find it equally difficult to know what not to believe." . . . You will, I know, ridicule my belief in lucky and unlucky days, but no consideration can now induce me to undertake anything either on a Friday or a Sunday. I am positive it would terminate unfortunately. Every one of my misfortunes—God knows I have had my share—has happened to be on one of those days."

HORSES IN BATTLE.

Methods of the Days When Chariots Were Used in Warfare.

In the old days when the Romans and Greeks fought furious battles the charioteers drove their cars in all directions, hurled their javelins and by the din and clatter of horses and wheels commonly threw the ranks of the enemy into disorder and, making their way among the squadrons of the enemy's cavalry, leaped down from their chariots and fought on foot.

The charioteers then withdrew little by little out of the fight and placed their chariots in such a way that if they were hard pressed they could readily retreat to their own side. Thus in battle they afforded the mobility of cavalry with the steadiness of infantry.

Daily practice enabled them to pull up their horses at full speed when on a steep slope or to run out on the pole and stand on the yoke and to get him back into the chariot.

With the introduction of cavalry in the later iron age came larger horses, but their use for this purpose seems to have been restricted to isolated areas. There is no doubt that the west German tribes as late as the campaign of Caesar in Gaul used only the shaggy pony. It is said in cavalry actions they held it disgraceful and slothful to use any kind of saddle, and instead of charging in squadrons they dismounted and fought on foot.

As far as England is concerned the art of riding seems to have been introduced by the Romans, the Saxons appear to have been but indifferent horsemen.

MAYOR WELCOMES STATE COUNCIL

Sons and Daughters of Liberty Open Their State Convention in Pythian Hall with 285 Delegates Present.

With 285 women delegates in attendance the twenty-second annual session of the New York State Council, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, was formally opened this morning at Pythian Hall, Wall and John streets, by State Councilor Ross Dugan and her associate officer. The initial meeting was public and Mayor Dugan presided. He presented to the assembly immediately following the singing of "America." The opening proceedings had been delayed owing to the non-arrival of a pastor from one of the city churches.

The mayor made a brief personal greeting, saying that the people of Kingston are always glad to welcome fair people to this fair city. The word fair, he said, was intended in a two fold sense referring to the disposition of the order as well as to the appearance of the delegates. The speaker then spoke of the principles of the order as portrayed on a banner stretched across the hall, these being: Fidelity, Patriotism and Integrity.

"Any order that is organized in support of such principles," he declared, "runs no risk of breaking up or crumbling."

Fidelity was defined by the mayor as adherence to duty and what he believed to be right and true. Integrity was the like of which. The mayor said was "pious, thorough and sincere" and through all circumstances and the moral soundness of practice inspired was also dependent upon patriotism. The speaker found a congenial theme and a profitable local setting.

"Patriotism means," said the mayor, "devotion to our country, many but to one that is a limited and restricted meaning. I believe it means being true to God, true to country, true to our homes and true to our friends. No one can knock at the door of Kingston without being impressed upon the patriotic service which its early history commemorates. This city played a most important part in the making of our country. Here the constitution was read for the first time in front of the court house a few hundred feet distant from this point and it was here that the Empire State began its history as a constitutional state."

Early Local Patriotism. Of the enactment of the first laws of the state, the supreme court's first sessions and our own uprising in the matter of tea and taxes were most interestingly pictured by the mayor together with action of the women of Kingston in going to the place where speculators had stored tea and taking what they wanted leaving in place thereof six shillings and six pence.

act of the continental congress. The burning of the city for its aid to the patriots' cause and numerous other patriotic incidents in the history of the Colonial city were touched upon together with the prominent place the country occupied in the world today.

"What is more important," said the speaker in conclusion, "is not our financial or material standing in the present but the question has the country increased its correspondence in fidelity, patriotism and integrity. If it has not, then there is a field for organization with the principles such as you espouse."

Chamber Extends Greetings.

Secretary James F. Confield of the Chamber of Commerce was then escorted before the session and spoke a welcome for that organization, citing some of the points of interest for the delegates from the old colonies such as the Senate House to the new structures as the high school.

In expressing appreciation of the mayor's words State Councilor Dugan said: "They have been beautiful and I am sure will sink into the hearts of all present. In addition to the principles mentioned this order supports the reading of the Bible in our public schools and reverence for the flag for the sake of the children for whom it holds the protection of the greatest country on earth, our country."

Willing to Do Their Part.

The state officer also thanked the chamber for its greetings and for the automobile ride around the reservoir stating that the delegates would not mind walking five or ten blocks for that privilege.

The State Council officers then served an omelette for the mayor and the public session was closed. The delegates today will take up the election of officers and other business of the order, the sessions being secret. Tomorrow the installation of the officers-elect will be held and it is thought that the session may conclude late Wednesday night or Thursday noon.

State Treasurer Perkins today stated to a reporter "that an early news item in reference to this convention which appeared in the Freeman was in error in stating that the Sons and Daughters of Liberty were the women's auxiliary of the United Order of United American Mechanics. She asserted that the auxiliary order has no women's auxiliary."

Optimistic Thought.

To make good use of leisure is difficult.

Mr. Dingee's Dinner

Story of a Marriage Anniversary.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The day Silas Dingee married Maud

he declared that never before had he known real happiness. He swore that the anniversary of that blessed day which ended his bachelor loneliness would be more to him than all the holidays in the calendar together. A cynical friend at his farewell bachelor dinner the night before had said to him:

"Si, I'm sorry for you. Tomorrow on go to serve your life long term of regulation. Farewell independence. Farewell a jolly night at the club. Farewell cocktails, they'll taint your mouth. Farewell cigars, they'll make you cough. Goodbye, Si. The matrimonial prison doors will soon close behind you."

"You dried up old bat," was Dingee's reply, "tomorrow will be the happiest day of my life. And let me tell you whenever the anniversary of my wedding comes round I'll have some delicate memento for the dear girl who is to furnish that happiness. I shall on that day remain at home from business and devote it to celebrating my escape from such crusty old bachelorhood as you represent."

When Mr. and Mrs. Dingee were driven away after the wedding festivities, followed by showers of rice and old shoes, it looked as if his promise would be kept. It ever there was a happy man it was Silas Dingee.

One year passed. Mr. Dingee had been made over by his wife from a bachelor to a married man. He had tried to live for some one besides himself. The first anniversary of his wedding had come round, the day that he had vowed he would celebrate above all others.

As Silas Dingee shrugged on his overcoat that morning preparatory to making a dash for the nearest subway station his pretty wife spoke from the dining room door:

"If I'm not at home when you come, dear."

"Going out this afternoon?" interrupted Dingee peevishly.

"Just to Mrs. Wych's for bridge, honey," she soothed him. "If I'm not here the moment you arrive just get a bite to eat from the refrigerator and read your paper until I come. It won't take me fifteen minutes to get dinner after I arrive—steak and mushrooms. Silas—let's Hilda's afternoon out."

"Seems to be always Hilda's afternoon out and yours, too," grumbled Dingee as he kissed his wife farewell and departed.

As he opened his newspaper on the train he was still thinking of his dislike of being alone. It was one of his peculiarities that he was a restless man, and when alone he was always restless. When alone he was always restless.

On such occasions he usually called a taxi and sped home on the wings of love and rubber tired wheels. Today everything went wrong. In the mail he found several misdirected letters, which had been returned to him. One of them was an important matter, which involved the loss of considerable money.

So he discharged the careless stenographer, scolded his chief clerk, scolded the office boy into a state of humility and lunched at his club.

After luncheon things went better. He telephoned to Chicago and found that he wouldn't lose the money after all. When the fearful stenographer came for her money he gave her another trial, and the office boy was emboldened to ask for a raise in his pay.

Whether he received it or not is not part of this tale, but at 4:30, when Mr. Dingee closed his desk he was feeling in high good humor with himself and the world.

He had quite forgotten all about the lonely apartment he must return to and stopped to buy some violets for Maud. While he stood there who should rush up to him with hearty greeting but Tom Finch, Maud's Boston cousin and a particular chum of Silas Dingee's.

"Just going up to your place," remarked Tom.

"Wichy glad to see you?" cried Dingee heartily. "Maud's out this afternoon at some whiff but or other, but she'll be home by 6:30. We can have a bite to eat as soon as we get there."

"Good! I'm hungry. Had a little accident coming down. The buffet car and one coach derailed. Nobody hurt. Haven't had a bite since 10 this morning."

"Man alive, hurry!" Dingee hustled Tom into a taxi, and they whirled up town.

"It's 6 now. Maud will be home in a few minutes," said Dingee as he opened the door with his latchkey.

But the rooms were dark until he switched on the lights and revealed the warm coziness of the place.

"Well, have to forge a bit," said Dingee as they left hats and overcoats in the hall and entered the dining room. "I'll make you a cup of coffee, hey?"

"Just the thing. I'm starved, old man."

They entered Hilda's spacious kitchen and investigated the refrigerator.

"Cold chicken! Not bad for a hand-out," commented Tom Finch as he pounced on the plate.

"What's that, Silas—making of a salad?"

"Yes, and here's the marmosade."

Take 'em along. Maud certainly has got some goodies put away for me.

Let's try the pantry."

The pantry gave up a remarkably dainty lot of bread and a huge round cake thickly iced with white.

When the men had set the table in the dining room there was a feast indeed.

"This is a regular birthday party," chuckled Tom as he carved the chicken. "Maud needn't bother about getting any dinner. This is good enough for me!"

"Suits me down to the ground," agreed Silas Dingee. "I suppose Maud will scold when she finds I've treated you to a picked up meal when she likes to put on company frills when you come down."

"Humph!" sniffed Tom Finch, who was more interested in the good things before him than he was in the elaborate preparations for any meal. "Seems to me you live pretty high. Didn't I see a steak and mushrooms and some kind of pudding in the icebox?"

"You did," said Silas cheerfully.

"Those are for dinner."

"What is all this food for then?"

"Search me!" retorted Silas. "Have a piece of this perfectly 'splendid' birthday cake?"

Tom Finch looked rather startled and laid down knife and fork. "You are sure—sure it isn't anybody's birthday?" he faltered.

Silas meditated. "Not mine or Maud's. It may be Hilda's or the cat's birthday. They don't count, though. What's that?"

"That" proved to be the buzzer from the dumbwaiter, and Silas Dingee hastened into the kitchen and fussed around a bit. Presently he returned and sat down again.

"Ice cream," he explained. "Maud's evidently going to have it for dessert. Funny, though, she should have ordered such a quantity."

A feeling of apprehension settled over the two men as they consumed the delicious cake, which was rich with fruit.

"If ever I tasted a birthday cake!"—Tom was beginning when Silas Dingee interrupted impatiently.

"Hanz it all, man, can't you stop croaking? What if we have eaten every hanged thing in the house, eh? It's my house, isn't it? I'll eat the ice cream if I want to!" he ended recklessly.

"Let's say something for Maud," grinned Tom Finch as he pushed back his chair.

As he spoke the door opened hastily, and Maud Dingee, flushed and rather excited from her hurried trip home, came in, followed by a remarkably pretty girl with ermine furs snuggled around her neck.

"Tom Finch!" cried Maud, falling on her cousin's shoulder. And over his shoulder her eyes surveyed the remains of the feast.

Silas Dingee looked at his wife and saw horror in her gaze. She came forward and looked at the remains of the chicken, the evidences of salad, the bare half loaf of bread and finally the damaged cake.

The girl in the doorway looked on with friendly, amused eyes.

"Silas Dingee," shrieked Maud at last, "what have you done?"

"Had a bite to eat, as you told me to do."

"But—but—you—her voice was close to tears now—"you've eaten all the refreshments!"

"Refreshments for what?"

"For my party."

"Your party? When?"

"Tonight, goose!" she sobbed angrily. "Didn't you know that this is our wedding anniversary and it's Polly's birthday, and I was going to have the loveliest surprise for you? The Campbells are coming and the Lanes and the Treas."

Silas Dingee was pale, but he held his ground.

"How was I to know, Maud?" he explained.

"You might have remembered the day," she reproached him.

"I did," he prevaricated. "Didn't I bring you violets?" Triumphant he produced the box of flowers.

Still Maud eyed him suspiciously. "You often bring those on ordinary occasions," she said, but her husband's chagrined face quite melted her heart so that presently she smiled and said it didn't matter and remembered to introduce Tom to the pretty Polly in the doorway.

Everything turned out beautifully, after all. Dingee frantically telephoned to a caterer and a florist, and Maud and Polly dashed around and straightened up the rooms for the expected company.

They ate a hurried meal in the kitchen. Tom Finch skillfully making sandwiches for the two girls.

It was a most delightful party. Still, Dingee said there was one tiny cloud which even the sight of Tom's devotion to Polly could not lift from his wife's heart.

Although he did not ask for an explanation, Silas Dingee is quite sure that Maud was more hurt because he had forgotten that it was their wedding anniversary than she was over the stolen dinner.

However, to be on the safe side, he has carefully noted on his desk calendar the important date for next year, and there isn't any likelihood that he will forget it, especially as Tom and Polly have selected the same date for their own wedding.

Flounce upon flounce of soft tulle falling over a dainty flesh-colored satin lining goes fast to make this dance gown a charming affair. Elaborate pearl bead fastenings, and embroidery afford rich trimming. The bodice is extremely simple, the only relief from the folds of tulle being the wide band of pearl embroidery.

Muir Could Drive a Bargain.

Most people know that the famous naturalist and writer, John Muir, left a substantial fortune behind him when he died, but few perhaps are aware that during the ten years he dedicated altogether to business he was known as the hardest man at a bargain in the whole of California. "As a bargainer," writes Arno Dosch, "John Muir was pure Scotch. Muir had the biggest and most dependable supply of Tokay grapes in California. The San Francisco jobbers bought his yield to meet their regular shipments to the north and east. There were at that time four big fruit jobbing houses in San Francisco, and they tell tales yet in Commission row of the barzains John Muir drove with them. He was never known to name a price first. Whether he was selling grapes or land, he tried first to find out what the other man was willing to pay. But he always had a price in mind, and he got it. It made no difference what was the market price of grapes. He made the jobbers pay what he expected."

Lighting London Streets. In 1416 citizens were obliged to hang out candles on dark nights to illuminate the streets. This was enforced by an act of parliament in 1531. In 1684 Edward Hemmings, the inventor of oil lamps, made a daring offer, which was that for a proper consideration he would engage to place a light before every tenth door on dark nights from 6 p. m. till midnight. His proposition was accepted, and he was given the exclusive right to light the streets as indicated for a term of years. But the scheme provoked a great uproar among the people. Some of them enthusiastically applauded it and hailed Hemmings as the greatest benefactor of the city ever had. Thousands of other furiously denounced him and his scheme and demanded that the contract be canceled. Hemmings held on and in time the people became reconciled to having the streets lighted. In 1736 the city government assumed the responsibility.

Escapes in War. Until war ceases, which will be the greatest miracle of all, it will always be the exhibition ground of miracles. How can a bullet puncture a man's coat behind and before or pierce his boot and sock and be gravely shaken out of both without wounding him? And what mysterious channel does this human body contain which leads a bullet dexterously around the heart, a hair's breadth from the seat of life, yet never finding it—a phenomenon vouchsafed by more than one army surgeon? Shells have burst thunderously between the very legs of soldiers and left them still soldiers. Shells of two inches in diameter have passed through legs and arms without shattering the bone or bursting at the impact, although there appears to be literally no room for such a merciful performance. In fact, a history of the escapes in war would be wild reading even after a course of Munchausen.—Exchange

Well Put. A man who kept a roadhouse in Rhode Island was called upon to testify in a suit as to the number of cubic yards hauled in some rock removing and filling in of lots in the vicinity.

Naturally enough, he showed very little knowledge of the matter, his idea of a cubic yard being so indefinite that it was suspected he hardly comprehended the term. In order to facilitate his understanding the judge said:

"Listen, witness! Assuming this inkstand to be three feet across the top this way and three feet that way and three feet in height, what would you call it?"

"Well, your honor," said the witness, without hesitation, "I should say it was some inkstand."—New York Times.

Modern Methods. "Can you alter that gown to fit me, do you think?"

"Certainly not, mademoiselle. That isn't done any more. You must be altered to fit the gown."—Life.

"Get married. Then you won't dare to talk in your sleep."—London Saturday Journal.

A ROYAL NURSE.

The Czarina of Russia as Red Cross Worker.

HER DAUGHTERS ALSO SERVE.

Sends a Message of Gratitude to This Country For the Relief of Russian Soldiers by Americans. Saddened by the Long Strain of the War.

Mrs. Marye, wife of the former American ambassador to Petrograd, who recently returned to this country, spoke enthusiastically of the work of the American hospital in Petrograd in which her husband was president and in which she served as a nurse almost to the day of departure from the Russian capital.

Just prior to leaving his diplomatic post Mr. Marye was decorated with the Order of Alexander Nevsky by the czar.

Mrs. Marye had an audience with the czarina a few days before leaving. The meeting took place in Tsarskoe Selo, one of the royal palaces.

"The czarina seemed very sad and sorrowful over the troubles of the war," commented Mrs. Marye in speaking of the visit. "She is a most beautiful woman, but her features show her inner sorrows."

"The czarina sent a message of gratitude to America for the relief work done for Russians by Americans. A great deal of effective work in aiding wounded soldiers has been accomplished by the hospital in Petrograd that was founded and is maintained by American money."

"It has been visited from time to time by the czarina, who, with two daughters, took a complete course in nursing. She has actually acted as a nurse in military hospitals too."

"There are forty-five beds in the American hospital, and they are always occupied; also the institution has always been taxed to the utmost of its capacity, even though native hospitals have had empty beds in jills in lighting."

"One of the most picturesque little figures in Russia is the eleven-year-old czarvitch. He hasn't even been a good health, you know. But he's a game little youngster, and every time the czar goes to the front his little boy is certain to be in the trenches with him. The child is a great favorite with the soldiers."

Mrs. Marye said that, except for the omission of evening dress and the use of ordinary garb, Petrograd goes its merry way as usual. The opera and ballet continue despite the war.

Hotels are so crowded that they have to turn away persons every day. Many of the guests, she said, are American and English business men.

Flounce Skirts. The flounced skirts are charming in thin black, whether two, three or five tiers or composed of many rows of little ruffles. A rival of these models is the petal pointed skirt, which, at first plain edged, now often has its points outlined with a narrow frill, sometimes plaited, sometimes gathered. A charming version of this idea was seen a few days ago. At first sight it seemed to be composed of haphazard points and frills, but there was really a definite scheme in the arrangement. There were three tulle skirts, one over the other, cut into different shapes, the two top ones edged with ruffles. Their placing was clever, and the dainty widening at the hips was insured by a bit of haircloth—or in braid it is now called—which was placed under the tulle.

Maple Ice Cream. Boil a pint of milk in the double boiler. Mix three beaten egg yolks with a cup of milk, then stir into the hot milk. Melt a cupful and a half of maple sugar, or take the syrup and add to the thickened milk, and take from the fire. Add a pint of rich cream and when cooled, freeze.

Knickerböcker Salad. Take head of romaine, cut length ways in half, lay in regular order on each half, one slice of romaine, one slice of alfalfa, one slice of apple, one thin slice of tender green or red pepper, one slice of grapefruit, and so on. Pour over French dressing.

Delicacy. A woman went into a country hotel every one hot, sultry, summer day. "I have some of that nice plum cake," said she to the baker. "That's all no plum cake, lady," said he, "but my arm gently to and fro over the delicacy."

Fine Symphony Program.

The music loving people of Kingston seemed to accept the almost inevitable weather conditions attendant upon a symphony orchestra concert, and attended the last season concert of the Symphony Society given at the high school auditorium last evening in goodly numbers. The program opened with the first two movements, the "Andante; Allegro ma non troppo," and the "Andante con moto" of Schubert's great C Major No. 7. Symphony. It took nearly the whole of the first movement for the instruments to become solidified in pitch, following the clearing of the windows and the exclusion of the damp air, and as the total effect became more satisfactory the musicians under Conductor Muller's baton, both literally and figuratively warmed up to the occasion. There was something inspirational in the very first notes of the evening's performance; the beautiful "chief theme" of the first movement, played as a horn solo by Mr. Deutscher, formerly horn soloist in Seidel's orchestra. The second movement, because of its very character, takes hold of an audience more forcefully on less acquaintance than the first, and the musicians presented the number with considerable grace and effective shading, and good ensemble. Of the two short numbers, "Gavotte and Musette," by Raff and "Twilight" by Cezak, the latter was by far the most artistic in its production, as the orchestra gave a really poetic rendition of this work. One of the most difficult numbers on the entire program was the "Allegro con grazia" (second movement) from the tragic "Symphonie Pastorale" by Tchaikowski. The orchestra, following the conductor's interpretation and leading, played this work, with its strange rhythm and sense of restlessness remarkably well, giving a fine sense of continued motion. While the audience was warm in its applause of every number, it was especially enthusiastic over this one and the final symphonic work of the evening.

At the opening of the concert, Mrs. Read, secretary of the Symphony Society, spoke of the future of the organization. All patrons and subscribers were asked to hold their tickets bearing their names until next season, when the value of the festival concert, which could not be given this year, will be made up to them. Mrs. Read said the society was still hoping that there would arise in the community one who would do for the Kingston Symphony Society what the late Colonel Higginson did for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, put it on a permanent basis. But in the mean time a different plan of operation would be installed another year; a more effective plan, the growth of past experiences. She then called attention to the fact that the public was more and more appreciating the symphonic orchestra, as was shown by the fact that all of the symphonic numbers on the program had been especially asked for, particularly the closing number, the Allegro Movement from Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, which was beloved alike by orchestra and audience. Calling attention to the devotion to careful study and often self-sacrificing work on the part of both Conductor Muller and the orchestra, and their desire not to keep all the beautiful music to themselves after they had gained it, but their wish to share their treasures with the entire community, Mrs. Read said that in view of the afternoon audience of boys and girls, who had listened with such earnest interest and pleasure to the music, a long vista of inspiration and helpfulness opened up for such an organization if it could be supported and maintained and gradually perfected through the coming years, and that not only for our own community but this entire middle section of the Hudson valley. But to do this, the financial as well as friendly support of the people would be needed. It was not given the boys and girls of today would have a right to condemn this generation of Kingstonians for depriving them of a heritage of beauty that would be rightfully theirs because of its possibility. Never has the orchestra so risen to the occasion and their best efficiency, and finest interpretation as they did in the "Unfinished" Symphony, and every member of the audience seemed to as well enter into the spirit of the hour. Said one of our best qualified musical critics and musicians in the city: "In that work, the orchestra showed the progress it has made, even since the last concert. It was rarely remarkable after all, nothing so remarkable as the progress made by the musicians under Mr. Muller's conducting as well as makes them known and enjoyed by the audience." Still another musician known to be particularly alive to the influence of a program as well as the work of the players, spoke with keen appreciation, not only of the excellence of last night's performance, but of the sense of "refreshment" gained from the concert as a whole, and expressed the hope that the impressions of the concert would so go with the people of Kingston who heard it, as to gain their heartiest support for another year. Real regret was expressed that the last symphony concert of the season was over with, and the society hopes this regret will blossom into hopefulness for the coming year.

RUBBER IN WAR.

Some Facts About a Commodity Unknown Prior to 1800.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., June 13.—The tremendously important part which rubber is taking in the present war in Europe and equally in the United States' punitive expedition in Mexico makes the following bulletin, issued by the National Geographic Society from its Washington headquarters, of significant interest:

"The fact that practically all the commissary supplies and ammunition required by American troops south of the Rio Grande are being transported in motor trucks, and the news that an automobile train of 18,000 cars was employed to rush reinforcements and munitions to Verdun during the first hours of the German drive against that great French fortress suggest a modification of one of the axioms of the great phrase-maker and military genius, Napoleon. The modern army marches on rubber instead of on its stomach."

"The product of the rubber trees of the tropics is as vitally a contraband of war as gunpowder, steel, copper, dynamite or nitric acid, for the ironhoused warhorse of former days has evolved into the padded-wheel motor car, motor truck and motor cycle of 1916."

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 13.—Horsemen are rebelling against the niggardly purses being offered on the New York running tracks—and the public, as usual, is the goat.

The prizes offered to bracket horses at both the Jamaica and Belmont tracks have been amazingly small, in view of the "take" at the gate. Some of the total prizes for each race run only around the $500 mark; others are lower; a rare few are higher. As a result, some horsemen who intended campaigning their animals on the New York courses are shipping them elsewhere. Day after day there are numerous scratches.

The average field at Belmont was somewhere around five horses. Once a two horse race was staged. Three and four horse brushes are frequent. Rarely does the field total eight or ten, as is the case on other tracks where the meet promoters are somewhat liberal.

The numerous withdrawals were at first charged to the fact that many of the steeds were afflicted with a coughing ailment. It is true that such an epidemic did rage at Belmont but that didn't render such a vast number of them hors de race as was reported. From one of the horsemen we get it that none of the owners is anxious to risk his horses in a race where the biggest prize his horse could win is a few hundred dollars.

"The stinginess of the promoters at Belmont is apparent to anyone who will take out a pad and do a little figuring," said the horseman. "The Decoration Day crowd there was about 29,000. The admission was $3 for men and $1.50 for women. Figuring 20,000 men and 10,000 women it means that the total receipts were about $75,000. And on that day the race officials ran off six races with total prizes amounting to a trifle beyond $6,000. The average daily intake for the meet probably will be $20,000. And the average purses are around $4,000. Can you blame the horsemen for kicking?"

Campi Asked Right Party.

Eddie Campi, the prize fighting person, wandered into the Belmont Park paddock and became greatly interested in a certain horse.

"Say, fellah," exclaimed Eddie, enthusiastically slapping upon the back a dignified man who was standing alongside, "what horse is that? Who owns him?"

The man who had his back slapped, turned around in a startled way and saw the eager face of the prize fighter staring into his. For a brief second the man seemed to hesitate between impulses—one to move away; the other to answer the question. His face softened into a smile and he gave Campi the name and the full history of the horse.

"Say, that bird knows all about horses," said Campi's friend. "That fellow was August Belmont, the foremost figure in the horse racing game in America."

Those who ask—"when is a baseball not a baseball?"—may find the answer here.

The Giants were playing the Reds in New York, with the home crowd at bat. Burns was on second and Doyle was at bat. There were two out at the time. The Red hurler served one up to Doyle and he smashed a bouncer to deep short. Herzog almost ran out of the diamond to snare the ball—but he got it.

Herzog saw in a flash that he had no chance to catch Doyle at first because Larry at that very moment was three jumps away from the bag. Had Herzog made the throw Doyle would have beaten it by three strides at the very least. So Herzog, having noted that Burns got a slow start from second flipped the ball to third. Heine Groh grabbed it and touched out Burns sliding in for the third out.

Doyle didn't get a hit on that play. It was scored as a fielder's choice. Yet if the runner had been on the bags Doyle would have beaten the throw easily. It was a clean hit but the slowness of Burns in that particular instance robbed Doyle.

The play also stands out as another instance of Herzog's braininess. Ninety per cent of the other short-fielders in the game would have had their minds so focused on making the play at first, that they wouldn't have taken a third into consideration. But Herzog did and because of that he beat Doyle out of a hit, killed off a man going to third, retired the side and possibly stopped the Giants from scoring in that particular frame.

Red Monograms Challenge Kingstons

Editor of Freeman.

Dear Sir:—Considerable interest has been aroused over the fact as to whether the All Kingston baseball club or the Red Monograms are the champion ball tossers of this city. There is no way of deciding this fact except by a meeting of the two clubs in a series, as both teams have met and defeated the fastest teams along the Hudson. In view of the above, and being strongly of the opinion that they have the best club, the Red Monograms hereby challenge the All Kingston team to a series of games, same to be played at any time or place convenient to the management of the All Kingston team.

Thanking you in advance for your valuable space, I am respectfully,

P. ZWECKER.

Mrs. Red Monograms, Kingston, N. Y.

Hot Liners.

(By Frank G. Menke.)
Philadelphia and Brooklyn were the only teams to uphold the dignity of the east yesterday.

The Giants were the victim of one of those battling matinees they have been inflicting on the other teams.

Those Washington boys are sliding fast. Griffith hasn't all Johnsons for pitchers.

Those Tigers refuse to be downed. The Yankees against were the victims.

The National League champions jumped into second place but the Dodgers refuse to leave the top rung.

Plank pitched for St. Louis and won out. Wonder if he's related to those things the Democrats are struggling with.

The Indians still keep a'going. Nothing but the pennant will satisfy them now.
